"Peace In The Midst of Trouble"

A gay young girl of Baltimore, long ago, resisted the wooing of the Holy Spirit, declaring she perhaps could become a Presbyterian; but never a Baptist! Hearing a Baptist minister say, "The religion of the Lord Jesus Christ will give peace in the midst of trouble," that girl, Annie Armstrong, surrendered her life to Him. This surrender expressed itself through many years of service for missions made increasingly possible through the newly organized Woman's Missionary Union. As its first corresponding secretary, she became a great-souled pioneer in missions. Indians, Negroes, immigrants, mountain folk, all became objects of her love.

Miss Armstrong led in the first prayer season for home missions in 1895, naming it the Week of Self Denial and Offering. That year many women responded with over $10,000. In 1954, women answered their own prayers for home missions with an offering of over $1,000,000. Again this year members of Woman's Missionary Union will unite in prayer for home missions and bring extra offerings to "give peace in the midst of trouble" to the lost of our homeland.
