

DIED

At his residence, near Wilkesboro', N.C., on the evening of the 14th ultimo, COL. WILLIAM PITT WAUGH, in the 77th year of his age.

COL. WAUGH was a native of York, now Adams county, Penn., and emigrated to Wilkesboro', N. C., in December, 1803, where he established himself as a merchant and trader, which profession he continued to pursue until his death. For many years, in connexion with his partner, MAJ. JOHN FINLEY, he was engaged in a most extensive mercantile and trading business, by which he amassed a large fortune, and which, having no family of his own, has been left by his will to numerous relatives in various parts of the United States.

He was a man remarkable for sagacity and sound sense, and possessed an intuitive knowledge of men and motives which rarerly deceived him in the multifarious transactions with the world, in which it was his fortune to engage. During the war of 1812, he raised a company of volunteer cavalry, and served a short term of military duty, but owing to the difficulty of procuring forage in the Indian country, the cavalry regiment was discharged and returned home. COL WAUGH possessed many excellent traits of character, and although he never made profession of religion or became a member of any church, he was nevertheless a most hospitable and generous host, kind and benevolent to the poor, and liberal in his contributions to all denominations of christians. His remains were interred in the burying ground in Wilkesboro', and were followed to the grave by a very large concourse of citizens--the funeral services being performed by the Rev. Messrs. Bell and Barber, of the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches.

DIED,

At his residence, near Wilkesboro', N. C., on the evening of the 14th ultimo, Col. WILLIAM PITT WAUGH, in the 77th year of his age.

Col. Waugh was a native of York, now Adams county, Penn., and emigrated to Wilkesboro', N. C., in December, 1803, where he established himself as a merchant and trader, which profession he continued to pursue until his death. For many years, in connexion with his partner, Maj. John Finley, he was engaged in a most extensive mercantile and trading business, by which he amassed a large fortune, and which, having no family of his own, has been left by his will to numerous relatives in various parts of the United States.

He was a man remarkable for sagacity and sound sense, and possessed an intuitive knowledge of men and motives which rarely deceived him in the multifarious transactions with the world, in which it was his fortune to engage. During the war of 1812, he raised a company of volunteer cavalry, and served a short term of military duty, but owing to the difficulty of procuring forage in the Indian country, the cavalry regiment was discharged and returned home. Col. Waugh possessed many excellent traits of character, and although he never made profession of religion or became a member of any church, he was nevertheless a most hospitable and generous host, kind and benevolent to the poor, and liberal in his contributions to all denominations of christians. His remains were interred in the burying ground in Wilkesboro', and were followed to the grave by a very large concourse of citizens--the funeral services being performed by the Rev. Messrs. Bell and Barber, of the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches.

[We have been requested to publish the above notice, by the relatives of the deceased, some objectionable passages having occurred in the obituary which appeared in this paper some time since.]
