WIDELY-KNOWN AREA LEADER, MRS. KESTER A. SINK, DIES

Memorial Rites Held On Monday At First Baptist

MRS. KESTER A. SINK

Memorial services were held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the First Baptist Church of Mount Airy for Mrs. Kester A. Sink, Route 7, Mount Airy.

The widely-known community leader was claimed by death late Sunday at Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem.

Mr. and Mrs. Sink, owners and operators of Hollyview Farm, Franklin community, were named North Carolina Master Farm Family in 1961. Active in home demonstration work, she was a former member and chairman of the Surry County Home Demonstration Council and was a past president of the Eleventh Federated District of Home Demonstration Clubs.

Mrs. Sink was immediate past-president of the Democratic Women of Surry County and had served as vice-chairman of Mount Airy's sixth precinct for 15 years. She headed the Surry County Women for Dan Moore organization in 1964 during Gov. Moore's primary election campaign.

She recently served as a member of the Governor's Commission on Motor Vehicle Responsibility.

An active member of the First Baptist Church, she was past director of the Junior Choir and past assistant organist of the church.

Born in Surry County, Mrs. Adelaide Bunker Sink was the daughter of Albert L. and Nina Angell Bunker, prominent residents of this area.

She was graduated from the Mount Airy schools and, in 1943, graduated from Meredith College, Raleigh. A member of the Junior Arts and Crafts Guild, she taught music in the public schools here from 1946-1966.

Well-known for her musical talents, she had presided at the organ or piano for many local functions, including Kiwanis Club programs and the Jaycee-sponsored Miss Mount Airy Pageant. She was also organist for the 1966 Mount Airy High School Senior Play, "South Pacific."

Surviving, in addition to her husband and mother, are two daughters, Miss Adelaide Alexander Sink, a sophomore at Wake Forest University, Winston-Salem, and Miss Dorothy Louise Sink of the home; and two sisters, Mrs. George J. Almy of Freeport, N. Y., and Mrs. James H. Ward of Plymouth.

Silas Gordon Will Celebrate 100th Birthday

PILOT MOUNTAIN—Silas Gordon of Pilot Mountain, Rt. 2, will celebrate his 100th birthday Sunday at his home near Pinnacle. Friends and relatives are expected to drop by to convey good wishes.

Gordon, a farmer, began farming 82 years ago and recently attributed his longevity to a moderate pace and clean living. "I have never smoked a cigarette or cigar, never chewed tobacco, never been drunk and never paid out anything for violating the law," Gordon told a reporter four years ago.

He has been a director of the Bank of Pilot Mountain since its founding in 1914.

Hollyview's Master Farmers

The Kester Sinks of Surry

THE VIEW — Tobacco and corn fields and the rolling hills beyond Stuart Creek provide an impressive view from this holly in the backyard—one of two great trees that gave name to the farm.

By Martin Howard
Journal and Sentinel Farm Editor

MOUNT AIRY — Pretty soon, Surry County will observe a recognition day honoring one of its most outstanding rural families, Mr. and Mrs. Kester A. Sink and their two daughters, Adelaide Alexander (Alex), 13, and Dorothy Louise, 10.

The Sinks were recently designated Master Farm Family of 1961 by the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service and the Progressive Farmer.

What constitutes such a family, within the definition of this 35-year-old annual award program?

Briefly, it is a family that has come a long way from where it started, now enjoys a high degree of success and high repute as citizens, and shows convincing promise of making even greater progress in the years ahead.

But before the State Extension Service and the Progressive Farmer bestow their joint accolade of Master Farm Family any year, the recipient family has been measured, with almost slide-rule precision, against 10 standards of excellence — including the Christian virtues of personal integrity, service to others, and the family's influence for good in both agriculture and community life.

Kester Sink himself, nearly 38 and an unassuming sort of man, is not a little bit flabbergasted by the whole business of this high award.

"Why," he said last week, "we've just been working and living and minding our own business—trying to improve our own lot and doing what we can in community affairs. Mastering a farm, or being a 'master farmer,' probably takes more than one lifetime. And as for being a 'Master Farm Family' — well, we're grateful for the honor. Maybe trying to measure up will help us."

Those who know the Sinks—and certainly most people in Surry County do—know the honor bestowed on them is well deserved, on all counts.

From the standpoint of growth as a farmer, "minding his own business" is probably the key to Kester Sink's success to date. Trained in agriculture — including the phases of economics and marketing and finance—Sink approached farming in 1947 with the knowledge that modern farming is a business and must be treated as such.

He and his young wife, the former Adelaide A. Bunker, settled in the century-old two-story home on Hollyview Farm — and proceeded to devote thought and effort to both farm-making and homemaking.

The fine old frame building—one of two built by the famed Siamese Twins on either side of Stuart Creek Valley in the mid-1800's—was in a good state of repair but called for modernization. For several years, the young Sinks confined their living quarters to three rooms on the ground floor.

The farmland was something else again. Good fertile land it had been made by Nature. Essentially good land it still was—though much of the fertility had been farmed out. In fact, aside from the seven acres for tobacco and a few open patches here and there for corn and garden, the once open farmland had become largely reclosed by briar and bush.

Fresh out of State College, Sink began, as he later said, "putting into practice what had been preached to me."

Reclearing the land, he limed and fertilized for improved pasture and hayfields. He headed the land toward meeting requirements for best soil conservation and the rebuilding of fertility—terracing where needed, meadow-stripping some of the low spots, planting cover crops and—later—rotating row crops year by year.

He stuck with the tobacco as cash crop, of course, but added Hereford cattle and a few broodsows. He grew corn and small grain crops.

He gradually got all the farm buildings painted and a few new ones built. As he could afford, he began mechanizing—until, by the early 50's, his pair of faithful Old Dobbins had been largely retired to take their ease in the deep shade of the numerous great trees that characterize Hollyview.

And this was about the time, too, when the wonders of hybrid corn were revolutionizing the production of this crop in North Carolina as elsewhere—a transformation that since has boosted state average yields from 20 bushels per acre to 50 and made 100 bushels per acre commonplace.

"Both the practical benefits of greatly improved yields and the marvels involved in the scientific process of inbreeding, outbreeding and crossbreeding to gain such high-yield seed corn," Sink said last week, "made a double appeal to me. I turned to the adapted hybrid varieties and found that they fullfilled every claim. But there was one troublesome drawback, I found at corn-planting time one year: I had difficulty locating enough seed corn to plant."

Slow Process

It takes six to eight years of the breeding process to produce the seed to be planted for actual harvest as grain. A new supply of seed from this long process must be planted each time to avoid the gradual decline in yield resulting from a reversal of the upbreeding process. At that relatively early stage in the production of hybrid corns, seed stock was in short supply.

By the mid-50's, a thought that had been "bugging" Kester Sink for several years abruptly brought him to a decision:

"I may as well learn the facts about this seed deal and get into the business, myself."

He started with five acres. Last year he grew 144 acres of corn hybrids for seed. A half - dozen standard adapted corn seed varieties bearing the "Certified Hollyview Hybrids" label are now sold to farmers all over Northwestern and Western North Carolina.

Chief Enterprise

Plainly, hybrid seed corn is Sink's chief farming enterprise today. Not the only one, though. He buys about 100 feeder calves each year and grows them out to fat slaughter weights. The farm's tobacco allotment is still produced, by a tenant. Recently Sink added 25 broodsows for feeder pig production. He will grow pigs for sale under the Frosty Morn contract program managed in this area by Henry Ramseur. He is planning pasture and buildings to increase sow numbers to 100, adding 25 each year.

This swine enterprise is something of a hybrid arrangement—a registered York boar is used on purebred Hampshire and Duroc sows, to produce hardy and quick-growing pigs.

Sink soon learned, of course, that growing hybrid corn for seed purposes was by no means as simple as planting and harvesting corn for grain purposes.

"But I decided at the beginning," he said last week, "that if I couldn't learn to do as good a job as the best I had no business in this field."

By now, a seed corn farmer doesn't have to carry every crop through the eight-year breeding process. In Sink's case, he buys foundation seed of varieties adapted to this state and plants two double crosses to produce the seed that grain farmers will use the following year.

These foundation seed are planted a certain way—six rows of female corn (which will be detasseled) and two rows of male corn. This final crossing produces the vigorous, high-yield seed for farm use.

But this variation from simple corn planting is only a small part of the seed corn business. Let's take a quick look:

Mechanically Picked

To begin with, at harvest time, none from the rows of male corn will be used for seed, so a fourth of the crop goes immediately to feed corn storage. The rest of the corn is mechanically picked and husked and is processed during the late fall and winter.

The corn for seed is shelled and dried. It is then passed through a seed cleaner. Another machine grades it according to uniform width and thickness. Still another machine grades it for uniform kernel length. The corn is thereafter passed over a gravity separator, which picks out the light or faulty kernels.

Still another process treats the seed against fungus and insect damage. And, finally, Sink tests his corn through a new chemical method that measures the vigor of the germ in the kernel—thus indicating the percentage of germination that can be expected in the field.

Any batch of seed that fails to measure up to near-perfection is moved to the feed grain bin.

Widespread Market

The best evidence of Sink's success and thoroughness in learning his business is reflected, of course, by the widespread market he has built up—most of it now repeat business.

Another fact indicates the confidence Sink has won in this agricultural field: He is president of the N.C. Foundation Seed Producers Assn.

While Kester Sink has been busily engaged in farm development and shaking operations down into the best combination for success, Mrs. Sink has let no grass grow under her own feet.

From the first, she made full use of home-grown food supplies, canning and preserving, and in more recent years, keeping the deep freeze well stored.

She gradually brought housekeeping to appropriate measure for the roomy home. Remodeling and refurnishing have progressed unit by unit.

The two Sink daughters—Alex and Dottie Lou—have progressed also, with a due portion of their mother's time devoted to them. Now 13 and 10 respectively, the girls are alert students at school, active in youth programs—and active as well at home, helping their mother, and themselves learning the arts of homemaking.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Sink have drawn freely upon farm and home information provided by the Agricultural Extension Service through agricultural agents and home economics agents. They have, in turn, made themselves useful in furthering such county programs for the benefit of all.

Extension Help

"We gratefully acknowledge the willing and beneficial assistance we have received from extension workers," said Sink.

Mrs. Sink serves as a member of the Surry Extension Advisory Board, a group of 15 rural men and women who work with the county commissioners and the extension agents in development programs best suited to their particular county.

A music major graduate from Meredith College, Mrs. Sink is director and organist for the Junior Choir at First Baptist Church. She is also music director for the Surry Council of Home Demonstration Clubs. At times she teaches school music (without compensation). She is an active member of her own Franklin Home Demonstration Club. She serves as library committee chairman for the Mount Airy Junior High School.

And when election years roll around, Mrs. Sink still finds time to show her interest in public affairs: She is vice chairman of her voting precinct and an assistant judge at the polls.

Outside Activities

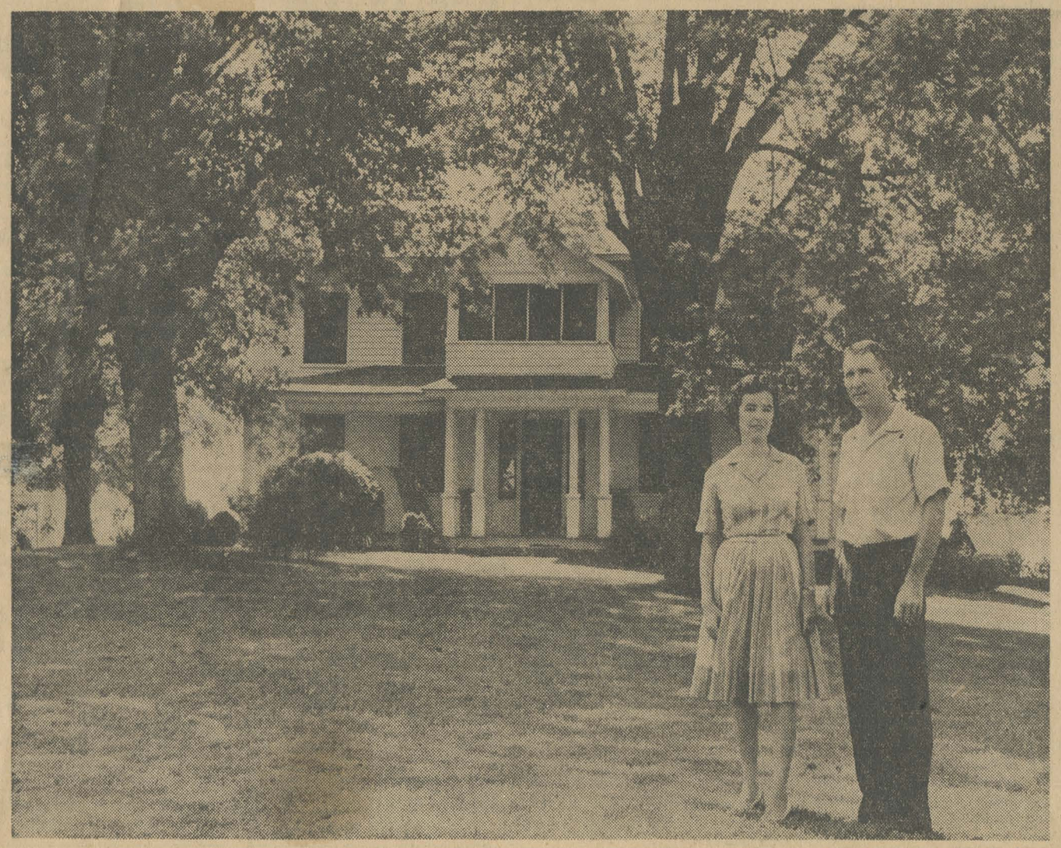

Kester Sink is active in the work of his church, and has served variously as deacon, Sunday School superintendent, and teacher. Similarly, he has served in official capacities with the Mount Airy Kiwanis and Ruritan Clubs and the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. (He was a first lieutenant in the U. S. Marine Corps during World War II.)

A busy life?

"We stay busy but not too rushed," says Mrs. Sink. And if you think it's even necessary to ask how she feels about modern farm life, you get the answer expected: "It's the best!"

Sink is a native of Thomasville, the son of the late John A. Sink. His mother lives on Thomasville, Rt. 1.

Mrs. Kester Sink is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bunker of Surry.

THE HOME—Mr. and Mrs. Kester A. Sink are proud of their century-old home near Mount Airy, modernized and enhanced in recent years by relandscaping of spacious grounds and remodeling inside.

EXCERPT FROM "CHATS ON HERALDRY"

BY

Sara F. Washington

The founder of the Hill family, whose coat of arms is illustrated, was de la Hill, a knight who came to England with William the Conqueror in 1066. His descendants went from there to Ireland. Arthur, son of Sir Moses Hill of Hillsboro Castle, County Downe, Ireland built a fortress at Hillsboro during the Irish Rebellion. In 1680 this was made into a royal garrison and he and his heirs made constables of the castle.

One of the first of the family to come to the colonies was Henry Hill, Sr., who settled in Nansemond County, Virginia. William Hill, Sr., was born in Virginia in 1710, moved to Surry County, North Carolina, shortly before the revolution. He had part in the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence of 1775, was a member of the Provincial Congress, Hillsborough, North Carolina 1775. He was a prominent and patriotic citizen, rallied the troops and at one time was hanged by the English but cut down before he died.

Dan Hill, a distinguished and highly respected member of the family, was born in Virginia and moved to Nashville, Tennessee in 1738. He fought in the Revolutionary War and his name is on the monument to Revolutionary soldiers in the courthouse yard at Nashville. Before coming to Nashville he was a member of the South Carolina legislature. "He was a very human man- a lover of the Bible - a devoted Baptist".

Some of the families that join the Hill line are: Matthews; Reeves; Calloway; Willis; Anthony; Pope; Wooten; Lewis; Lane; Jordan; Grigsby; Clark; Calhoun; Ransom; Wellborn; Shepheard; McKinnie; Harvie; Washington; Ewing; Creecy;, etc.

There used to be two wonderful old ladies in Russellville - Miss Lizzie and Miss Lew Hill, who raised a family of motherless neices and nephews who rose up and called them blessed.

Arms: Gules, two bars ermine in chief a lion's Bassent argent.
Crest: A boar's head sable, in the mouth a trefoilslipped proper.
Motto: "Spe labor levis" (With hope, work is light)

Views Discussed By Miss America

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI)—Miss America 1964 emerged yesterday as a young woman of abiding religious convictions who rejects sex appeal as a Miss America attribute.

Donna Axum, who was chosen Miss America over nationwide television in Convention Hall Saturday night, met the press for breakfast looking fresh and rested after six hours' sleep.

The 21-year-old University of Arkansas brunette ranged over a variety subjects. Foremost among them were the conception of American womanhood and religious faith.

Brown-eyed Miss America said it was not her job or purpose to project sex appeal at the pageant or elsewhere.

"The quality of the wholesome, beautiful American girl is the quality we are trying to get across," she stated. In line with this, she added that her favorite female film star was Doris Day, who "reflects all-American womanhood." Her favorite actor is Cary Grant.

When asked her opinion of Elizabeth Taylor, the 35 - 23 - 35 banker's daughter replied: "I plead the Fifth Amendment on that."

A Baptist, Donna said a steady religious conviction was necessary: "One should have a faith, and a very strong faith, something to lean upon through life."

Nevertheless, she added, she did not leave it entirely to faith when she came to Atlantic City. She had three good luck charms —a bone from a rabbit's foot, a penny in an empty purse and a penny in her shoe.

"I'm very superstitious," she said.

She considers three her lucky number because she was born on Jan. 3, 1942, and the number is always cropping up when she is having good luck.

Miss America, who wore her light brown hair swept up in what she referred to as a French twist, said she had no romantic interest at present. "I like them all," she declared.

But she listed the man she one day hoped to marry as having "a wonderful sense of humor—he'd have to have to put up with me—ambition, and be a Christian gentleman who would love me and want a home." As for children, "I think two are enough."

Marriage, the 124-pound, 5 foot 6½ inch singer said, would have to wait until she finished her education and had a brief career as an entertainer.

Dinkins' Funeral Sched
Long-Time Farm Report

The funeral for Harvey O'Conner Dinkins, 61, for 16 years the farm service director of WSJS Radio and Television, will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday at Ardmore Methodist Church by Dr. Eugene Few, the Rev. Harold Groce and Brig. Gen. J. M. Satterfield. Burial will be at Mountview Memorial Park.

Mr. Dinkins died at 12:14 p.m. yesterday at City Hospital where he had been a patient since May 4.

He was born in Yadkin County to Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Dinkins. He attended East Bend and Boonville High Schools. He also attended the preparatory department of Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate, Tenn.

He graduated from Boonville High in 1922 at the age of 21. He explained that he taught at the school before he finished it.

He studied history, English and foreign languages at Guilford College where he received a bachelor's degree in 1926.

In 1939 he was married to the former Ruth LaVonne Blair. They have a son, Andrew Franklin Dinkins, a student at Catawba College.

Also surviving are a brother, Delbert R. Dinkins of East Bend; a sister, Mrs. S. H. Willard of Marshalltown, Iowa, and a half sister, Miss Mary Ruth Dinkins of Stanleyville.

Dinkins had been associated with writing and broadcasting for the Journal and Sentinel and WSJS Radio and Television since August, 1926, after his graduation from Guilford College.

For 20 years he was a reporter, feature writer and editorial writer for the Journal, covering city hall the courthouse and politics.

HARVEY DINKINS

He spent his first 21 years on his father's farm near East Bend. Those years were spent in general farming, growing tobacco, corn and wheat and raising livestock.

In 1945 the Journal and Sentinel created the post of farm editor, and Dinkins was chosen for the job.

He began broadcasting a farm program on WSJS Radio in 1946 and was billed as "North Carolina's favorite farmer."

MORNING, MAY 2, 1967

Paul A. Reid, Western Carolina College Head, to Retire in 1968

CULLOWHEE — Dr. Paul A. Reid, president of Western Carolina College announced Monday that he will retire June 30, 1968.

The announcement was made to the college trustees at their semiannual meeting Monday morning.

In a statement to the board, Reid noted that 65 is the college retirement age for persons in administrative positions. He will reach that age during the next academic year.

Retirement in 1968 will culminate a public education career begun 43 years ago as an elementary school teacher in Pilot Mountain, Dr. Reid's hometown.

He has been president of Western Carolina College since 1949 with the exception of 18 months as assistant director of the North Carolina Board of Higher Education.

During his presidency, Western Carolina College has grown from a small teachers college to a large liberal arts institution serving the entire state.

His achievements and accomplishments were praised Monday by Jonathan H. Woody of Waynesville, chairman of the trustees. Woody said Reid "has done more for Western Carolina College than words can be found to measure. The physical expansion under his leadership has been phenomenal. With his wise guidance, the academic program has been broadened and enriched in a sound educational manner."

Beyond this, Woody said,

DR. PAUL A. REID
. . . 43-year career . . .

Reid "has fostered here a spirit of learning, scholarship and service which has made the college an exciting and powerful force in the cultural, economic and social life of Western Carolina." The trustees, he said, "in deepest gratitude recognize how great a work he has done . . . and how difficult a task it will be to fill the position he now holds."

After retirement Reid said he plans to be occupied with study, research, writing, travel and recreation.

He interrupted undergraduate work at the University of North Carolina to accept a temporary job as teacher and principal of the tiny Hill's Chapel School in Surry County. A planned career in business thus was permanently altered and more than four decades in education followed.

During four years at Pilot Mountain as an elementary school teacher, Reid married the former Madeline Fulk and decided upon an education career. He earned his A.B. and M.A. degrees at UNC, later receiving the degree of doctor of literature from High Point College.

In 1949, Reid accepted the presidency of Western Carolina College, then Western Carolina Teachers College. In 1956, after the death of his first wife, he resigned to become assistant director of the state Board of Higher Education.

Eighteen months later Reid was called back to his former position by the college trustees and accepted the presidency again. In the meanwhile, he and Miss Nettie Haywood of Raleigh were married.

Cora Beasley Educational Fund Is Established Here

The memory of Mrs. Cora Beasley, who was fatally burned as she attempted to rescue her pupils in the Flat Rock school fire last February 22, will be perpetuated in an educational fund established this week.

Funds are already coming in, according to Attorney David L. Hiatt, who drew up the papers for the fund.

The Cora Fulk Beasley Memorial Educational Fund was unanimously endorsed several weeks ago at a county-wide meeting of school board members and teachers.

On Monday night at Flat Rock officers were elected to govern the fund. They are J. Sam Gentry, superintendent of Surry County schools; Joe Pell, chairman of the Surry County Board of Education; Joe Everhart, chairman of the Flat Rock School Board; Dr. Moir S. Martin, chairman of the Mount Airy School Board; and Attorney Talmage Hiatt, president of the Flat Rock PTA.

The latter was chosen as chairman.

Miss Grace Vaughn, executive secretary of the Surry County Red Cross Chapter, was named secretary-treasurer of the fund. Contributions may be sent to her at the Red Cross office in Mt. Airy.

The first contribution came from Mrs. Charles Folger's fourth grade at Dobson school. A number of individual contributions have also been made.

The fund is expected to draw support from throughout Northwest North Carolina and surrounding areas.

Fund Explained

The resolution on the educational fund is as follows:

North Carolina,
Surry County.

Whereas, the late Cora Fulk Beasley, for more than thirty years, devoted herself faithfully as a school teacher in Surry County, North Carolina: and

Whereas, on Friday, February 22, 1957, and while at her post of duty in the grade school of Flat Rock, Surry County, North Carolina, she was fatally burned as she attempted to reseue her pupils from the engulfing flames which destroyed the grade school building; and

Whereas, it is the feeling and purpose of her co-teachers and many friends in Surry County and throughout the state and country that an educational fund should be established in memory of the devoted life and service of Cora Fulk Beasley and that such a movement should be an inspiration and a help to many deserving young men and women of our community and country:

Now, Therefore, we, the undersigned parties, in consideration of the recited premises and in further consideration of the mutual promises and agreements herein made, do hereby join ourselves into a voluntary unincorporated, non-profit, educational association and to that end and for that purpose do hereby adopt the following articles of association:

Name—that the name of this association shall be the Cora Fulk Beasley Memorial Educational Fund.

Membership—That the initial membership of the Cora Fulk Beasley Memorial Educational Fund shall be composed of the undersigned citizens and residents of Surry County, North Carolina and adjoining counties. That only teachers, county and local school board members of Surry County shall be eligible as new members and they may from year to year be elected as members by a majority vote of the members of the association at its regular annual meeting.

That the said Cora Fulk Beasley Memorial Education Fund shall be governed and administered, without charge, by the Chairman of the Flat Rock School Committee, the President of the Flat Rock Parent-Teacher Association, the Chairman of the Mount Airy School Board, the Surry County Superintendent of Schools and the Chairman of the Surry County Board of Education and their successors in office. That in the event the designated officials shall decline to serve in this capacity or for any reason should be declared ineligible, then the association in its regular meeting shall designate five of its members who shall constitute a Board of Trustees and shall hold all funds and property belonging to the association and govern and administer the said funds, all in keeping with the provisions of these articles of association. The governing body herein provided these articles of association. The for shall from time to time organize itself by the election of a Chairman, Sec. - Treas. and such other officers as may be desirable all of whom shall serve without compensation.

Meetings: That the governing body or Board of Trustees in the foregoing paragraph provided for shall call an annual meeting of the members of this association to be held at such reasonable times and places as the said Board may determine and may be held in conjunction with a county - wide teachers meeting, provided an agreement can be had with the teachers organization. The Board of Trustees shall have the authority to call any special meeting of the association to be held at suitable times and places in the Surry County newspapers. A majority of the undersigned members of the association may likewise call a special meeting under the same rules herein provided in the event the Trustees do not qualify and are not acting.

Objects: That the objects of this association shall be:

(a) To collect and receive from the fellow teachers, friends and the general public all such contributions as may be from time to time made and to issue receipts for such contributions and shall deposit such funds in the name of the Cora Fulk Beasley Memorial Educational Fund in one or more local banks.

(b) To issue checks upon said account to be signed and counter signed by the appropriate officer or officers of the governing Board in payment of stationery, postage, receipt books, publicity and other such incidental expenses as may be necessary and incurred.

(c) To make and extend loans to Nancy Beasley and children of the Flat Rock School who were burned in the fire which destroyed the elementary building of the said school and such oher deserving young men and women of Surry County who may stand in need of financial assistance to enable them to obtain a college education. That said loans shall be made without interest during the time that the borrowers are college students but shall bear legal interest after the completion of their college training. That the governing Board of Trustees shall require the students to execute a promisory note for such leans granted and in the event the students are minors, their parents or other persons standing in loco parentis shall join as principals in the execution of said notes.

(d) That in the event the funds herein provided for shall become of such size as to enable the Trustees to grant small scholarships without jeopardizing the corpus of the funds, the Trustees shall have such right in their good judgment and sound discretion to provide one or more scholarships.

(e) In order to be eligible to receive loans or scholarships as herein authorized the applicant shall be of good moral character and shall stand in financial need and otherwise a deserving person. The Board shall be the sole and final judge of the eligibility of any applicants or receive assistance from said fund.

VICTIM OF SCHOOL FIRE—Mrs. Cora Beasley, 53, of Mount Airy, critically burned in the Flat Rock School fire in Surry County last Friday while leading her third grade students to safety, died early yesterday at Baptist Hospital here. She was the wife of William M. Beasley. (See story on Page 1.

Mrs. Beasley, Heroine In Flat Rock Fire, Dies

Mrs. Cora Beasley, the Mount Airy teacher who valued the lives of her students more than her own, died at 4:45 a.m. yesterday at Baptist Hospital here.

The 53-year-old teacher was critically burned Friday in the Flat Rock School fire which claimed the life of nine-year-old Larry Adams and injred more than 30 others.

Remaining in her classroom until her children were on their way to safety, Mrs. Beasley was dragged unconscious from the blazing school by A. P. Phillips, Flat Rock principal.

She was hospitalized here with burns covering more than 50 per cent of her body. A breathing tube inserted in her throat enabled her to breathe, but a member of her family said she was unable to speak during the four and a half days she lived after the fire.

George Fulk of Pilot Mountain, Mrs. Beasley's brother, said last night that the family's major concern now was for 11-year-old Nancy Beasley, the teacher's daughter.

"Her greatest desire in life was to see Nancy educated," Mr. Fulk said.

In Raleigh, the legislature adjourned in memory of Mrs. Beasley, following a motion presented by Surry Representative Joe Fowler Jr. of Mount Airy.

Flags on the Surry County schools are flying at half mast, and the schools will close at noon today.

Funeral services for Mrs. Beasley will be conducted at 3 p.m. today at the Friends Church in Mount Airy by the Rev. Seth Hinshaw and the Rev. Howard Yow. Burial will be in Oakdale Cemetery.

Pallbearers will be John Davis, Dr. Roy C. Mitchell, Tom Brinkley, Bernie Combs, Jack Vogler and Joe Haynes.

Mrs. Beasley was born Aug. 5, 1903, in Surry Cou... the daughter of Sidney A. and Hulda McGee Fulk. She lived with her husband, Mount Airy merchant William M. Beasley, at 130 Worth Street.

She had taught for 33 years and had been at the Flat Rock School for 20 years.

Also surviving are a half brother, Gray Fulk of Pilot Mountain; a sister, Mrs. G. W. Hill of Greensboro; and a half sister, Mrs. James Moody of Lexington.

Seven Children Hurt In Fire Do 'Nicely'

Baptist Hospital reported last night that seven children hospitalized with burns incurred in the Flat Rock School fire "were doing nicely" although three are still on the critical list.

Frank Hensley Jr., 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hensley of Mount Airy, Route 2; Marsha Ann Semones, nine, daughter of Mrs. Beulah Semones of Mount Airy, Route 2; and Tamela Hiatt, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. Talmage Hiatt of Mount Airy, were still in critical condition last night.

Not in critical condition but seriously burned are Bobby Burkhart, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Burkhart of Mount Airy, Route 2; Howard Payne, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cicero Payne of Mount Airy, Route 1; Benny Goodman, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Goodman of Mount Airy, Route 2; and Johnny Haynes, eight, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bill Haynes of Mount Airy, Route 6.

J. S. Patterson Succumbs At 91

James Sollie Patterson, 91, of 173 Park Circle, Winston-Salem, died Sunday at Forsyth Memorial Hospital in Winston-Salem.

Funeral services were held at 11 a. m. Tuesday in Voglers Reynolda Road Chapel in Winston-Salem. Burial with Masonic rites was in Pilot Mountain City Cemetery.

Born in Surry County, he was the son of Schuyler A. and Nannie Hill Patterson.

He once taught in Surry County and then operated a wholesale grocery business in Pilot Mountain from 1905 until 1929.

Mr. Patterson was elected treasurer of Surry County in 1914 and was filling that office when the present Surry County Courthouse in Dobson was built. He also served on the Surry County Highway Commission for several years in the 1920s.

A charter member of Pilot Mountain Masonic Lodge No. 499, he received his 50-year membership pin several years ago.

He was a member of the Ardmore United Methodist Church in Winston-Salem.

For the past 35 years he had been a self-employed manufacturer's agent.

His wife, Mrs. Mae Fulk Patterson, died in 1954.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. N. Ray Lewis of the home and Mrs. George C. Wright Sr. of Mount Airy; and three sons, James H. Patterson of 1225 Wedgewood Drive, Fred A. Patterson of 4523 Myrtle Avenue and Thomas W. Patterson of Martinsville, Va.

Driver of Ambulance Is Killed in Crash

A Pilot Mountain mortician was killed and his wife was seriously injured yesterday when an ambulance went out of control and plunged down an embankment on Highway 52, about three miles north of King.

Codell Owens, 48, an employe of the Needham Funeral Home, died while en route to Baptist Hospital.

His wife, Mrs. Mae Owens, 50, also a mortician, was in serious condition at the hospital. She suffered severe cuts on her forehead and scalp, and fractures of the left shoulder and left ankle.

The accident occurred about 4:15 p.m. near the Dalton Bridge. Mr. and Mrs. Owens were en route to Norfolk, Va., to get the body of Fred Ashburn, a native of Surry County, who died yesterday at a Norfolk hospital.

Mr. Owens was driving the combination ambulance and hearse.

State Highway Patrolman J. S. Powell said Mr. Owens apparently lost control after applying brakes. The highway was slick from a four-hour drizzle.

Patrolman Powell said the ambulance sideswiped the left rear fender of a car driven by Charles W. Walker of Winston-Salem, Route 6, before jumping a 37-foot bank on the left side of the road.

Both the ambulance and the Walker car were going south toward Winston-Salem.

The patrolman said the ambulance traveled about 1,110 feet on both shoulders of the road and across the highway three times. Skidmarks extended for 516 feet.

Mr. Walker told the patrolman he saw the ambulance in his rear view mirror as it weaved across the road. He said he pulled off on the right shoulder to avoid being hit, but that the ambulance grazed his rear fender and then skidded to the other side of the road.

The ambulance recrossed the road and nosed into the ground at the bottom of the embankment. The front end was demolished. The steering wheel was bent double against Mr. Owens' chest.

Paul Slate of the Slate Funeral Home at King arrived at the scene just seconds after the accident occurred. He and his wife were returning from a visit to

Mount Airy in their automobile and were traveling about four cars behind the ambulance.

Mr. Slate said he told people who stopped at the scene to make Mr. and Mrs. Owens as comfortable as possible while he went to King for his ambulance.

He said Mr. Owens stopped breathing just at he pulled into the driveway at Baptist Hospital.

Mrs. Owens is a sister of Ed Needham, operator of the Needham Funeral Home. She and her husband had worked for Mr. Needham for about 30 years. Mrs. Owens is among the few licensed women embalmers in the state.

O. M. Needham Jr. of Pilot Mountain, a nephew of Mrs. Owens, said Mr. Owens had driven ambulances and hearses for about 25 years without a serious accident.

Mr. Owens was born in Surry County, a son of Dee and Mary Gordon Owens. They survive along with his wife and four sisters, Mrs. J. M. Hall of Winston-Salem, Mrs. Clyde Bennett of Norfolk, Va., Mrs. R. A. Kiger of Rural Hall and Mrs. Russell Moore of Pilot Mountain.

The body was taken to Moody Funeral Home at Mount Airy pending the completion of funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Mary Stone

Word was received here yesterday of the death of Mrs. Mary F. Stone of Osawatomie, Kansas, widow of Squire Wesley Stone and a native of Surry County.

Mrs. Stone celebrated her 93rd birthday June 9 of this year. She had all of her seven children with her on that occasion.

Surviving are five daughters, Mrs. Mattie Gordon of Winston-Salem, Mrs. Lela Bauman of Freewater, Ore., Mrs. Minnie Crosson Patton, Calif., Mrs. Sadie Boyles of Paola, Kans., and Miss Clide Stone of Parsons, Kans.; two sons, Roby and Elmer Stone of Osawatomie, Kans.; a brother, Elder P. P. Stone of Dobson; a sister, Mrs. J. H. Sheets of Pilot Mountain; 22 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

Kennedy Grave's Design Disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — John F. Kennedy's gravesite will combine the solemnity of a family burial plot with a classic marble tribute of a nation to its young, assassinated president.

The eternal flame, flickering on the cemetery hillside since that sad day almost a year ago when the president's widow lighted it, will remain the central feature of the permanent gravesite.

Another feature will be words from Kennedy's speeches chiseled in a granite wall nearby.

The design for the gravesite was announced Monday at a news conference, six days before the first anniversary of the president's death.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, whose department supervises Arlington National Cemetery, announced that work on the gravesite would begin next fall and take about one year.

He said the preliminary cost estimate for the gravesite, its immediate surroundings, walkways and other improvements, is $2 million.

The grave area itself will be a grassy plot, just as now, where Kennedy lies beside his son and daughter who died at or shortly after birth.

Their graves, according to the design of architect John Carl Warnecke, will be marked by gray slate tablets in the traditions of early Americans in Kennedy's native New England.

The graves — overlooking Washington's skyline — will be surrounded by a broad rectangular white marble terrace.

In the center of the space — and slightly elevated — will be the grass plot with a slate marker, about 3 feet by 4½ feet, with small incised cross and this inscription:

John Fitzgerald Kennedy
1917-1963

It is to be flanked by the smaller tablets marking the graves of the children —Patrick, who died two days after his birth Aug. 7, 1963, and a daughter born dead Aug. 23, 1956.

Behind the tablets will be the eternal flame, burning in a bronze font.

His Own Vote Is Important

New York Times News Service

MINEOLA, N.Y. — When Julius R. Lippman of New Hyde Park cast his one vote for Julius R. Lippman on election day, he did not realize just how important that vote was.

Monday, the Nassau County Board of Elections officially declared Julius R. Lippman of New Hyde Park, the Democrat - Liberal candidate for judge of the Third District Court, the winner by one vote out of 106,741 votes cast.

The final vote as of Monday shows Lippman the winner over Frank X. Altimari, the Republican candidate, by a vote of 53,371 to 53,370. However, Altimari said he would appeal the results.

S. M. Gordon Obrves 102rd Birthday un.

Pinnacle's oldest citizen, Silas M. Gordon, is not yet ready to sit down and take life easy, even at 102.

He said so Monday and it came through loud and clear to his neighbors, his family and his community. And he said it in a way that few people do when they reach that age.

Mr. Gordon celebrated his 102 birthday last Friday. On Monday of this week, he was out hoeing his garden. When the job was finished, he walked to the home of his son, Robert, for dinner.

Since his birthday came on Friday, the family decided to wait until Sunday to have a party in his honor. And it was a real tribute to a man who has lived a long time and witnessed a lot of changes in his community, the state and the world.

There were between 175 and 200 friends and relatives on hand for the occasion at the Gordon home on Venable Road in Pinnacle. There was a birthday dinner with all his children, grandchildren, great - grandchildren and one great-great grandchild gathered around the festive board.

During his 102 years, Mr. Gordon has contributed to the growth and activities of his community and county. He was one of the first depositors of the Bank of Pilot Mountain and served on its board of directors for many years. He is also a former county commissioner.

When his driving license expired, in his 97th year, the Motor Vehicles Department said he was the oldest man to hold one. And during the many years he drove, he was never charged with a violation.

He produced his first crop of tobacco when he was 9 years old and his last one when he was 93.

W. H. Reid of Surry Is Still Active at 90

By Myrtle A. Hill
Journal Correspondent

PILOT MOUNTAIN — William H. Reid, who began his business career as a 15-cents-a-day plow hand and rose to prominence in the business world here, celebrated his 90th birthday yesterday—quietly.

The family saw to it that Reid's natal day wasn't forgotten by having a birthday last Sunday at the American Legion Home. Included in this family affair were his children, George B., Glenn and Richard Reid and Mrs. Ray Fentress, all of Pilot Mountain, Dr. Paul A. Reid, president of Western Carolina College at Cullowhee and Miss Catherine Reid, a librarian at Winston-Salem. All his grandchildren and great-grandchildren were present except Jimmy Reid, a grandson, who is with the Army overseas. Another grandson is State Rep. William G. Reid, Pilot Mountain attorney.

WILLIAM H. REID

Born Near Dobson

Reid was born near Dobson six years after the close of the War Between the States to Ervin and Martha Atkinson Reid. His father served four years in the Confederate Army. He was wounded five times and lost his right thumb.

"My father attended school only four weeks before he entered military service," Reid recalled, "but he came out of the army an educated man."

After leaving the plow, Reid worked for 65 cents a day as a carpenter and then became a sawmill operator. He later became owner and operator of a roller mill near Siloam. He sold this and went to manage Vade Mecum Springs in Stokes County. He came to Pilot Mountain in 1906 and had extensive sawmill operations here until 1911 when he went into the mercantile and coal business which he still operates.

Vice President

He was one of the organizers of the Bank of Pilot Mountain. He is now vice president and a member of the examining committee. "The committee meets each month and in the 44 years I have been a member I have missed only two meetings," Reid said proudly.

He married Miss Maggie Apperson of Siloam when he was 29 years old. She died some years ago. He married Mrs. Nell Speas Whitman of Pfafftown in 1945 and they reside on Depot Street. She is active in church and community affairs. She is particularly known for her home-made rolls and cakes which she shares with friends and neighbors.

Our Looking Glass

Then a more ole kittle drum.

Luther Hill hes kinda quiet,
Never has too much ter say,
Unlike Sid, the County Kerurner,
But like Pell ole W. A.

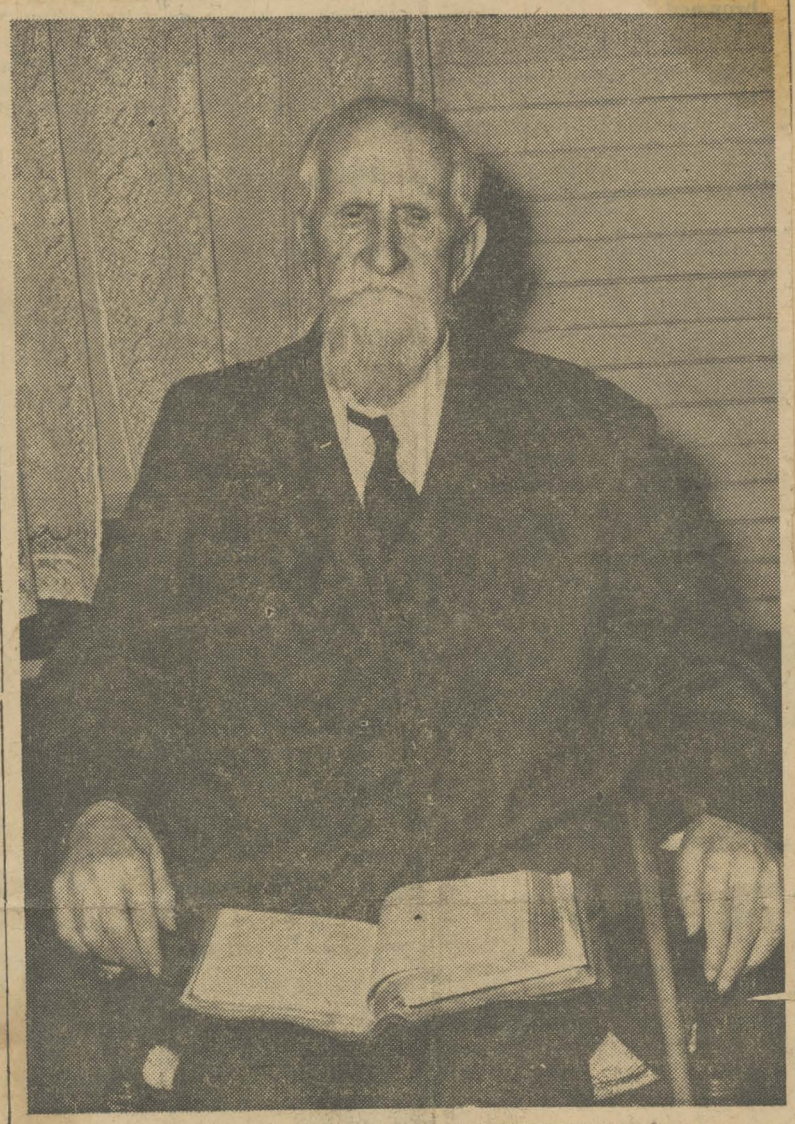

But Tom Edmuns, de pinhooker,
Takes de rag rite off de bush,
Whether kortin or in meetin,
Allers count on him in de push.

Now Will Stevins bin a runnin
Dodsons store for quite erwhile
Gwine ter buy it bout next

REV. NEWELL J. MATHEWS

Retired Pastor Here Passes 106th Birthday

Rev. Newell J. Mathews will celebrate his 106th birthday November 18 at the home of his son, Alvah Mathews, where he makes his home. He was born in Westfield, November 18, 1853. He was ordained a minister in Missionary Baptist Church in 1885 with his first pastorate at Holly Springs Church near Mt. Airy. Among churches he organized were Brown Mountain, Brims Grove and Walkertown.

The Rev. Mr. Mathews has been blind for about 30 years but still has a good memory and enjoys visitors very much, keeping fully abreast of the conversation around him. He said he doesn't smoke, doesn't chew tobacco or drink cowfee. He always looks forward to his birthday as he always has several visitors and gifts.

His children are his son Alvah and daughter, Miss Martha, of this city, Mrs. Emma Kirkman of Mt. Airy, Mrs. Ada Brown of Rural Hall, Mrs. May Medlin of Charlotte, W. C Mathews of Axton, Va., R. J. Mathews of Victoria, Va.

The Rev. Mr. Mathews receives a pension from the Southern Baptist Convention and he is the oldest preacher in the whole Southern Baptist Convention.

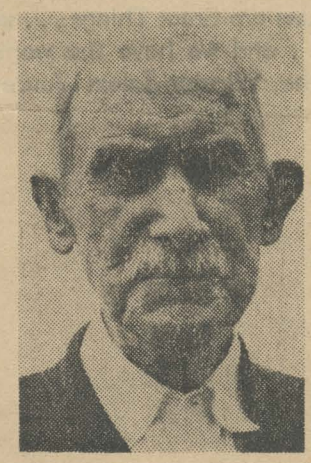

Silas Martin Gordon Dies in Surry at 102

PILOT MOUNTAIN — Silas Martin Gordon, who attributed his long life to temperance and hard work, died Sunday night. He was 102.

Mr. Gordon remained active until five days before his death, though his advancing age had gradually taken away many of his favorite activities, such as farming and driving.

He sold tobacco on the Winston-Salem market almost every season until he was 93, but after that he spent most of his time tending the yard and garden of his home on Pilot Mountain, Rt. 2.

Mr. Gordon prided himself on his moderation. "Well, I get sick sometimes, but hardly ever get down," he said recently. "The doctor said it was the way I took care of myself—not poisoning up my system. I don't smoke, don't chew. I've never been drunk."

S. M. GORDON

Drove 1931 Ford

He continued to drive his 1931 A-Model Ford until he was 97, and he only quit then because the state wouldn't renew his license.

Mr. Gordon was born in 1863 and was married to the former Betty Stone in 1888. Her parents had reservations about the match, for he was 5½ feet tall and thin as a rail, and they didn't think he could get much of a living from the land.

He began his farm operation with 40 acres, and through the years he expanded it into 327 acres, with 75 curing barns and six tenants.

He Cooked

He had given most of his farm to his three sons, Dallas E., Herbert E. and Robert Gordon, in his last years, keeping only 33 acres for himself.

Since his wife died in 1947, Mr. Gordon had kept house for himself and done his own cooking. He did his last recorded plowing last spring.

He deposited the first money in the Bank of Pilot Mountain when it opened in 1914, a[illegible] remained a director of the bank the rest of his life.

Besides farming, he did veterinary work for 20 years, in a time when professional veterinarians were rare in the section.

He was also a Stokes County commissioner for one term, though he was elected against his will, and was postmaster of the old Delk station for eight years until it was closed.

Mr. Gordon answered many questions about his long life the past several years, and most of his answers advised work and temperance. He told an interviewer in 1959, "I just don't see any point in getting old. Just give me one good reason."

He is survived by his three sons, Dallas E. Gordon of Pinnacle, Rt. 1, Herbert E. Gordon of the home and Robert Gordon of Pilot Mountain, Rt. 1; 10 grandchildren; 28 great-grandchildren; three great-great-grandchildren; and three sisters, Mrs. Lock Posey of Pinnacle, Mrs. Banner McDaniel of Arlington, Va., and Mrs. Doskie Fasion of Salisbury.

The funeral will be at 2:30 p.m. today at Volunteer Primitive Baptist Church. Burial will be in the church cemetery. The body is at Needham Funeral Home and will be placed in [illegible]urch at 1:30 p.m.

Treats His Patients

Doctor Works on 95th Birthday

By Jeanette Reid
Staff Reporter

PILOT MOUNTAIN—For his 95th birthday yesterday, Dr. James Meigs Flippin did the same thing he usually does any day—treat patients.

The lean, straight-shouldered doctor, probably the state's oldest practicing physician, maintains a regular practice at the office in his home here. His wife, a nurse, assists him. He made home calls until he was 90.

Although for most of his lifetime the large majority of doctors have been men, Dr. Flippin feels a strong need for more women doctors.

Asked why, he said, "Because they make such good ones."

His 23 - year - old daughter, Mrs. Douglas Graham of Winston-Salem, is a second-year medical student at Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

"In Russia, 97 per cent of the doctors are women," he pointed out.

As for socialized medicine, he hopes it will never come. And he predicts it certainly won't come for the next 100 years. His objection to it is that doctors would not be as good doctors.

Dr. Flippin has two sons by a previous marriage. Dr. Eugene Flippin practices medicine at Baltimore, Md., and Meigs Flippin Jr. does X-ray work there.

Dr. Flippin comes from a family which produced several doctors before him. His father, the late Dr. S. M. Flippin, practiced medicine at Westfield. His brother, the late Dr. R. D. Flippin, was also a physician. And several cousins entered the medical profession.

Dr. Flippin attended Dalton Institute from 1875 to 1880, then Baltimore Medical College, Jefferson Medical College and John Hopkins University.

In 1884, he started practicing with his father at Westfield. The next year he came to Pilot Mountain and opened an office here. Later he moved to Thomasville and Salisbury, but returned here in 1930 and has practiced here since.

He was Pilot Mountain's Man of the Year in 1955, and he has been honored by the Surry County Medical Society.

This year completes 75 years of service in the profession.

"I just wish we had known how to treat babies when I started practicing medicine as well as we know how to treat them today . . . We'd have a lot more old people now," he said. The average life span then was only 32 years.

He predicts that in another century people will live to be 100 or 150 years old.

The only factor that he feels has contributed to his own long span of life is not eating too much.

"Most people do eat too much," he added.

And the man who has been treating sick people for 75 years has experienced good health for most of his life.

Trying to stall off further questions, he said that he has also learned "it's best not to talk too much."

SILAS GORDON

Silas Gordon, Now 97, Drives Car Regularly

A man who was born when the War Between the States was at its raging peak, who lived through the bitter Reconstruction Days, and made his last tobacco crop at the age of 93 because ris doctors insisted that he take more rest, celebrated his 97th birthday June 11.

Wednesday he appeared on IV for his fifth consecutive year.

The son of Sam Gordon and Elizabeth Tuttle Gordon, Mr. Gordon never lived more than five miles from the place of his birth.

He has three sons — Bob Gordon, Dallas Gordon and Herbert Gordon — 10 grandchildren and more great grandchildren than he has ever been able to count.

Prosperous Farmer

He has been a farmer all of his life and he has prospered.

In addition, he said, he served as a county commissioner for four years, operated a post office for 8 years, doctored cows for 20 years and has been an active bank director for more than 40 years.

While no records are available Mr. Gordon is probably the oldest active bank director in the United States.

Monday morning he drove his car from his home to the Amoco Service Station on No. 52, walked a mile to Pilot Mountain to transact business, returned to the service station on foot, drove home again, and was engaged in starting his lunch when he took time out to talk about his life.

"I can see just as well as ever some distance away but I have trouble in reading fine newspaper print," Mr. Gordon said.

He keeps a spick and span house, cooks his meals, washes his clothes in a washing machine on his back porch and tends a fine looking vegetable garden.

"Every man should be required to keep house, attend the babies, iron, wash, cook and do all household chores for at least one month in order that he can have the proper appreciation for the contributions of wives," he said.

"A good woman's the best thing on earth. Nothing can take her place," Mr. Gordon added, with conviction.

Mr. Gordon attends the Baptist Church regularly.

Sunday morn that 100 friends and relatives came to his home for the annual birthday dinner.

"They come every year and always have a good time," he said.

j Mr. Gordon said that he never smoked or chewed tobacco. He made his first crop of tobacco when he was 18 years of age, which he sold at Brown's warehouse in Winston-Salem.

"I made my last crop when I was 93 years old and I said told that at Brown's also."

Mr. Gordon said that he keeps liquor in his house at all times. "But, I never use it except for medicine."

He is unbelievably agile and spry for a man of his years.

When we left he returned to his neat kitchen to continue the preparation of his lunch.

Hhe was gay about everything.

Silas Gordon of Stokes County was just 18 when he brought his first load of tobacco to the old Brown and Carter Warehouse here back in 1881.

He was back in town again yesterday, a mighty spry old man of 93 with another load of tobacco he had raised, cured and prepared for market all by himself.

In those 75 years since he made that first sale in 1881, Mr. Silas has missed bringing tobacco to Winston-Salem just one year.

And that was on doctor's orders.

Last year, he got a pain somewhere around the hip and they took him to the hospital. He hadn't been there a day before he was fussing to get home.

"The doctor wouldn't let me go," Mr. Silas said yesterday. "He said he was afraid I'd get well before they found out what was wrong with me."

It turned out to be something wrong with his gall bladder and the doctor finally sent him home with orders not to do any more work.

"I went home and plowed up the garden a little bit," Mr. Silas said, grinning. "But I didn't bother with a tobacco crop."

This year, he was feeling so good he decided to make a crop. Everything was going fine until the horse got sick.

son, D. E. Gordon, to come over to the farm and doctor the sick horse.

After looking over the horse, the son said, "Pa, you've been working this horse too hard."

A neighbor, who had come by, said, "Mr. Silas, what do you mean trying to work this horse to death?"

Mr. Silas' answer was typical of the man who has never been afraid of work.

"I was in a hurry to get through with my plowing," he replied.

He got through with the plowing and the growing and the curing and the tying and a week or so he brought his first load to market here. He got $153 for that first load of 270 pounds.

He had a sizable load with him yesterday and still has another to bring.

He figures the year's yield from that half-acre he grew all alone will bring about $500.

When he's not busy with his own tobacco crop, he helps his sons—D. E., Herbert and Robert—with their crops. Of his whole farm of 327 acres, he has kept 33 acres for himself and given the rest to the boys.

The entire Gordon farm, in the Volunteer community near Pilot Mountain, has about 35 to 40 acres of tobacco, 75 to 80 curing barns, and six tenants.

Mr. Silas' typical day starts anywhere from 4 to 5:30 a.m. when he gets up and fixes breakfast. He's been "batching" it since his wife, the former Betty Stone, died 10 years ago.

From then until noon, he slops the hogs, feeds his 100 chickens, works his couple of acres of vegetables, some of which he sells in Pilot Mountain, and tends to the tobacco in season.

He fixes his own lunch and dinner, too, although he doesn't like cooking. Bedtime comes anywhere from 8 to 9 p.m.

For a while this past summer, it looked like he might not be able to keep on driving. His license came up for renewal and an examiner came all the way from Raleigh to see if he should be allowed to drive.

Mr. Silas met the man in Pilot Mountain, told him to get in the car (a 1935 model) and drove him the three miles out to the Gordon farm and back again.

He passed the test.

Mr. Silas figures work never hurt anybody, if one doesn't overdo it.

In addition to his tobacco growing, he served four years as a Stokes County commissioner, was a country postmaster eight years, has been a director of the Bank of Pilot Mountain off and on since 1914 (and has had money in there ever since it opened that year), doctored horses and cows for 20 years, and raised pigs, cows, chickens and goats for sale.

Although tobacco has been his main source of income all these years, he has never chewed or smoked.

He takes a little drink every once in a while, though.

"But I've never been drunk," he grinned.

Mr. Gordon smoked or chewed tobacco. He made his first crop of tobacco when he was 18 years of age, which he sold at Brown's warehouse in Winston-Salem.

"I made my last crop when I was 93 years old and I said told that at Brown's also."

Summer brings swimming, fishing and boating at Hanging Rock.

Warm Days Mean Trips to Hills

By Jeanette Reid
Staff Reporter

Warm days, returning birds, budding trees, spring flowers, restlessness, SPRING — all bid you come outdoors. And if restlessness takes the form of wanderlust, a trip is in order . . .

Whether for a Sunday afternoon drive or a week-long vacation, Northwestern North Carolina can prove the place to go.

Hanging Rock, Blue Ridge Parkway, Grandfather Mountain, Linville Caverns, Blowing Rock, Mount Mitchell and Winston-Salem are just a few. Unexcelled scenery, hiking, picnicking, boating, camping, swimming, golf, outdoor drama and historical sites are among the attractions offered.

You can start some of the activities now and begin planning others as spring rolls into summer . . .

In Stokes County

Hanging Rock State Park—containing 3,865 acres, several miles of open trails, and a 13-acre lake—lies just 35 miles north of Winston-Salem in the Sauratown Mountains of Stokes County.

It is one of the few places where you can loll on the beach, ooze white sand through your toes, and enjoy scenic beauty of the mountains all at the same time. Even though swimming facilities won't open until June, other activities begin as soon as the weather is warm enough.

Six cabins, accommodating a maximum of six persons for $50 per week, and camping sites are available throughout the season. Well-marked trails to Moore's Knob, Cook's Wall and Hanging Rock itself lure hikers.

Boating, fishing, bath house, concessions, picnic tables, stone pavilions, and open fireplaces also are provided.

On Parkway

Along the Blue Ridge Parkway, scenic overlooks such as the summit of 5,964-foot Grandfather Mountain and Blowing Rock's 3,656-foot cliff provide sweeping countryside views where distant peaks exhibit the color giving the mountains their name.

Motor routes and hiking trails are bordered with laurel, azalea and rhododendron blossoms from May through early July. Already District Ranger Ross Reeves reports the purple and pink-white rhododendron are so heavily budded they promise the most spectacular blossom exhibit ever seen on the Parkway.

Principal resorts of the area are Blowing Rock, Linville, Roaring Gap and Little Switzerland, but almost every community has guest accommodations. At Banner Elk, Lees-McRae College dormitories are converted into Pinnacle Inn during the summer.

The region offers opportunities for pursuing hobbies like handicrafts, gem-hunting, painting or photography.

Rhododendron blossoms spectacularly in Craggy Gardens on Blue Ridge Parkway.

Spruce Pine, the state's minerals capital, is a favorite for geologists, amateur gem collectors and "rockhounds," who find good hunting there.

Near Spruce Pine is the famous Penland School of Handicrafts, the largest strictly crafts school in America. Burnsville is a special for its art school and Parkway Playhouse.

A meadow on the slopes of Grandfather Mountain is the annual setting for "Singing on the Mountain," a 32-year-old event held on the fourth Sunday of June. Roan Mountain stages a Rhododendron Festival about the last week in June. A big late-summer event is the annual Blowing Rock horse show, begun 33 years ago.

Picnic areas abound in all the parks and along the parkway. Golf courses at the main resorts are open from late spring through early autumn.

For drama lovers, "Horn in the West" will open its sixth season at Boone June 28 and give nightly performances except Mondays.

With Daniel Boone as its central figure, the drama tells of pioneers who moved west to the Southern Appalachians and fought in the Revolutionary War to defend their frontier homes and their ideals of democracy. The Daniel Boone Theater, constructed for the production, is six miles from the parkway. Folk music, dancing, and handicraft demonstrations are featured on the grounds.

Farther west on the parkway is Mount Mitchell, towering 6,684 feet above sea level as the highest peak in Eastern America. The park there is open free to visitors from April through mid-October. Facilities include picnic areas, refreshment stand, camp grounds, comfort stations and hiking trails.

Plant Life

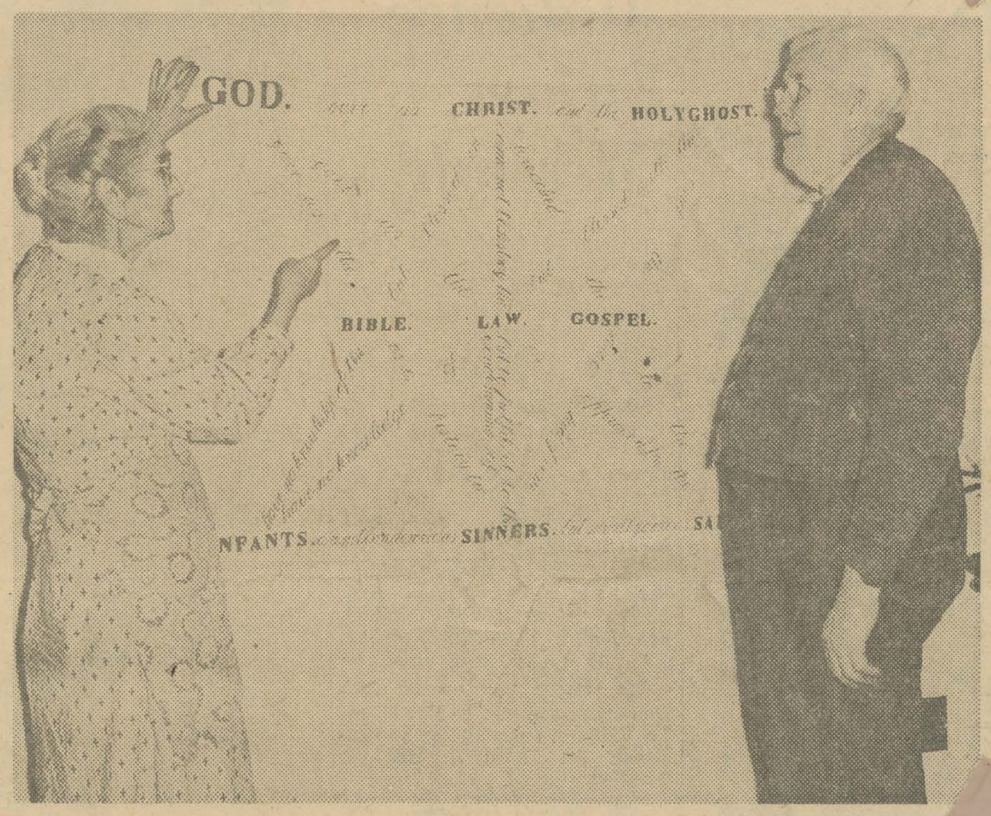

Plant life, more like that of Canada than Carolina, includes virgin balsam and spruce, with some birch, red cherry, mountain ash and hemlock. Shrubs include mountain maple, elder and wild hydrangea.

Crabtree Meadows Park, Cone Memorial Park, and Craggy Gardens are other tourist attractions along the way this side of Asheville.

The Parkway from Mount Mitchell to Asheville, closed in winter, will open about April 1. Construction will begin on a new five-mile stretch between Deep Gap and Blowing Rock.

For those who find Mount Mitchell too far or too high, Pilot Mountain might be better for a Sunday afternoon drive. The 2,700-foot mountain with its freak rocky knob is some 25 miles north of Winston-Salem. A swimming pool, concession stand and bath house are located about half-way up the paved road. Picnic facilities and wide views are provided from the parking area near the foot of the knob. For those more energetic, wooden steps lead all the way to the top.

Winston-Salem, less than 100 miles from the parkway, is restoring the 18th century community of Old Salem. Old Salem has opened three exhibition buildings to visitors, and has restored several other dwellings and public buildings around Salem Square. Exhibit buildings are Wachovia Museum, housing the largest collection of local antiquities in America; the John Vogler House, built in the early 1800's, and Salem Tavern built in 1784.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim McKiney display chart of vision.

Diagram on Linen

Preacher's Daughter Tells of His Vision

By Jeanette Reid
Staff Reporter

PILOT MOUNTAIN — More than 60 years ago a Primitive Baptist preacher making his home near Pilot Mountain had a vision.

During these moments of divine insight, he received knowledge which he put down in the form of a diagram just as it came to him.

The preacher died about 40 years ago, but the diagram embroidered on a rectangular piece of linen still exists.

This is the information related by his daughter, Mrs. Jim McKiney, who embroidered the linen and who now possesses it. She's now 78 years old.

Mrs. McKiney and her husband live at their country home near the Shoals community. Talking freely about the vision and the diagram, she seemed neither amazed that her father had the vision nor was anxious to impress others with its veracity.

It just happened sums up her attitude toward the incident which she heard her father, C. B. Denny, describe many times.

He was riding a mule on his way to preach at Mulberry Primitive Baptist Church. Suddenly he had a vision showing in diagram form the interrelationship between the Holy Trinity, the Bible, the Law, and Mankind.

When he stopped at a member's home for lunch, he wrote down the information on the back of a little book he carried in his pocket. He did it in minutes while the wife put dinner on the table.

Upon his return home he wrote out the information on a piece of white linen and she embroidered it in red and black letters. The background cloth, now showing yellowish signs of age, has small holes worked in the top by which it could be hung.

Mrs. McKiney explained that her father carried it with him and used it in his preaching after the vision.

His church, she said, was Cedar Hill Church about two miles away on the Ararat River. Others at which he frequently preached were Dover Church near White Plains and Stewart's Creek or Old Hollow Primitive Baptist Church near Mount Airy.

Her father received criticism from the Primitive Baptists because he would p r e a c h in churches of other denominations when invited, explained Mrs. McKiney. She is a Missionary Baptist. Her brother, George Denny, was also a Primitive Baptist preacher.

Her father used the diagram of his vision so much that the round button-type holes for hanging it gave way, and the material shows other markings indicating its frequent use.

Major words of the diagram are e m b r o i d e r e d in black. Across the top are GOD, CHRIST and HOLY GHOST. At the bottom in corresponding positions are INFANTS, SINNERS and SAINTS.

Centered between the top and bottom rows are BIBLE, LAW and GOSPEL.

The messages are revealed through in red connecting the major words in horizontal, vertical and diagonal lines.

It reads:

GOD gave us CHRIST and the HOLY GHOST

GOD gave us the LAW as approved by the SAINTS

GOD gave us the BIBLE as a history to SINNERS

CHRIST came not to destroy the LAW but to fulfil (SIC) it it to the condemining of SINNERS

CHRIST preached the GOSPEL to the SAINTS

HOLY GHOST and the GOSPEL are hid from SINNERS

INFANTS have no knowledge of the BIBLE but blessed in CHRIST

INFANTS have no knowledge of LAW but blessed with the HOLY GHOST

INFANTS are not condemned as SINNERS but saved by grace as SAINTS

CROSSING THE BAR

SUNSET AND EVENING STAR,
AND ONE CLEAR CALL FOR ME!
AND MAY THERE BE NO MOANING OF THE BAR,
WHEN I PUT OUT TO SEA.

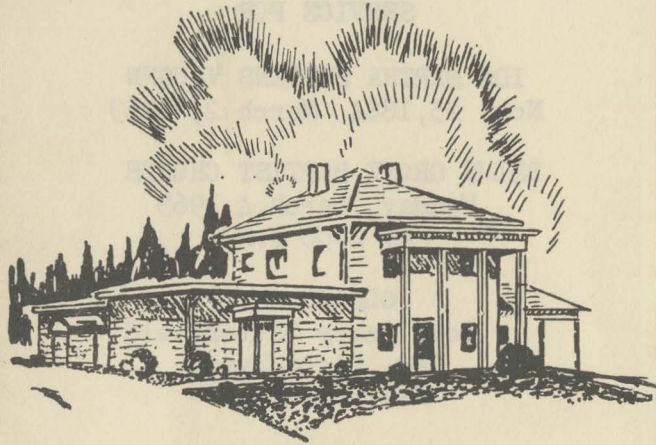

BUT SUCH A TIDE AS MOVING SEEMS ASLEEP
TOO FULL FOR SOUND AND FOAM,
WHEN THAT WHICH DREW FROM OUT THE BOUNDLESS DEEP TURNS AGAIN HOME.

TWILIGHT AND EVENING BELL,
AND AFTER THAT THE DARK!
AND MAY THERE BE NO SADNESS OF FAREWELL,
WHEN I EMBARK.

FOR THOUGH FROM OUT OUR BOURNE OF TIME AND PLACE
THE FLOOD MAY BEAR ME FAR
I HOPE TO SEE MY PILOT FACE TO FACE
WHEN I HAVE CROSSED BAR.

Worshipers gather in front of Home Moravian Churchurch for sunrise service as dawn breaks over Old Salem.

By Virtie Stroup

Christianity began with the man, Jesus Christ, who died and rose again, and by His resurrection convinced man that there is in the reality of things a power stronger and more ultimate than death.

This man lived among real men and women who, because of their tangible and visible evidence of Him, handed down to generation after generation an unbroken chain of evidence that Jesus was alive in their lives.

Thus it is that each spring Christians the world over dedicate the anniversary to proclaim the news that "The Lord is risen."

Other pictures of the Moravian Easter Sunrise service, Pages 2 and 20.

This proclamation was the essence of the service held yesterday at dawn in Old Salem. For the testimony to triumph over death forms the basic creed of the Moravian Church — as well as all Christian denominations.

At yesterday's 194th Moravian Easter Sunrise Service, approximately 20,000 worshipers uttered in unison belief in the resurrection — a union of visible and invisible.

The service is presented yearly by the Central Board of Elders of Salem Moravian Congregation as a time for renewing personal faith in the Risen Lord, for finding fresh courage to face life's experiences and for singing hymns of joy.

Largest Service

Dr. James C. Hughes, vice chairman of the Central Board and presiding minister of yesterday's service, called this year's service "larger than in years past." He said the Rt. Rev. J. Kenneth Pfohl, 91, bishop of the church and for many years the presiding minister, called the service "the biggest crowd ever," and estimated 20,000.

Bishop Pfohl, recuperating from a broken hip, watched the worshipers from his wheelchair on his porch and from the window of his home, which is at the entrance to God's Acre.

God's Acre, the Moravian name for the graveyard, was the scene for the final portion of the service. The worship began at 5:30 a.m. when Hughes stepped from Home Moravian Church, where he is pastor, and proclaimed the Easter salutation: "The Lord is risen."

Worshipers standing around Salem Square and along the procession route to and in God's Acre replied: "The Lord is risen indeed."

After the first portion of the service Easter morning, the standing congregation, accompanied by a massed Moravian band and community choir, walked to God's Acre for the rising sun and the remainder of the liturgy.

The crowd moved briskly in the cold morning, but even so, they were not all in the graveyard before the red ball of sun rose.

The final portion of the liturgy included profession of belief in baptism, communion and "Him who is the Resurrection and the Life!"

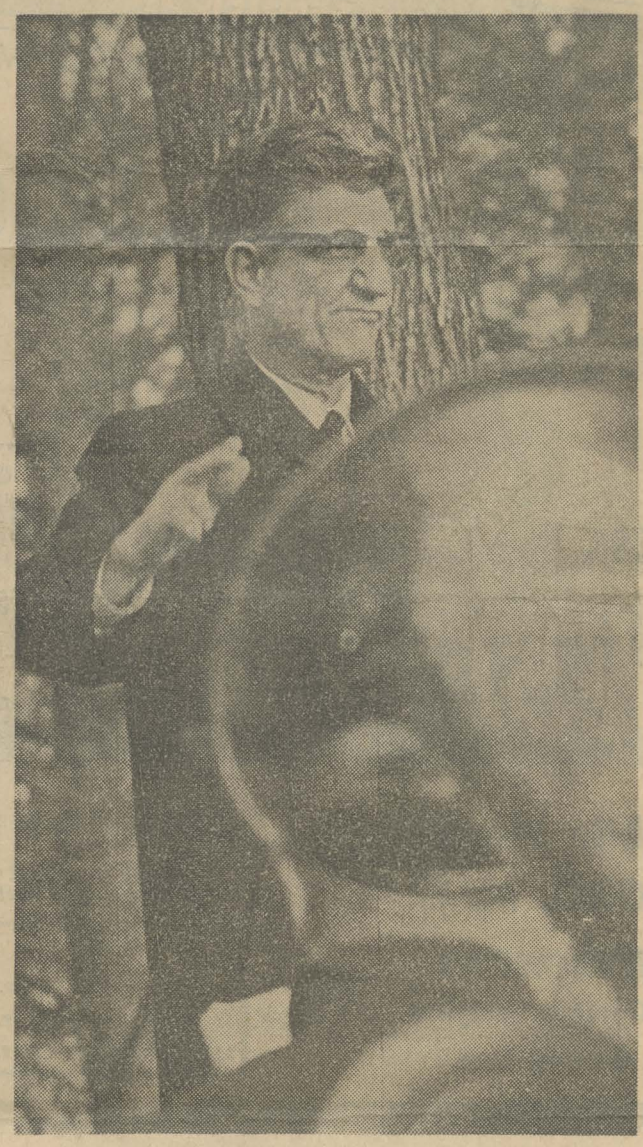

The service closed with the triumphant declaration: "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ; and He shall reign for ever and ever, King of kings and Lord of lords."

After the final chorales, the congregation dispersed quickly. Many went home. Others later attended the church of their denomination.

The day was glorious, clear, but cool.

Pope Paul Urges 'Rebirth of Man'

By Robert C. Doty
©New York Times News Service

ROME — Pope Paul VI appealed yesterday for an Easter "rebirth of mankind" to overcome the "totalitarian ideologies," racism, ambitious nationalism, class warfare and "political games of dangerous forces" that threaten to blight man's best hopes.

The pontiff directed his message and blessing to an estimated 250,000 people packed into the huge piazza before St. Peter's Basilica.

He made no reference to any current world problem, but his "profound sadness" clearly was prompted by everything from racial discrimination in South Africa and the United States South to nationalist interruptions of European progress toward unity, from the war in Viet Nam to Communist - bloc limitations on religious freedom.

The resurrection of Christ celebrated yesterday, the Pope said, was "the beacon of the spiritual and moral union of mankind . . ." Because of it, he said, "we speak confidently of the possibility of this triumph of unity in love and justice, in liberty and progress . . ."

He delivered his message, in Italian, standing in white vestments and gold miter, on the central balcony of the basilica, holding in his left hand a gold and silver staff topped with a crucifix.

He addressed "brothers near and far," those "joined to us"

Many Citie Proclaim Emergency

Transport Sn Worst in Year

By The Associated Press

An old-fashioned winter storm, with wild winds piling up house-sized drifts of steadily falling snow, blanketed and nearly paralyzed much of the Northeast Sunday night.

Countless cities and towns declared states of emergency as snowplows stalled in drifts, highways became impassable, buses and planes stopped running, church services were cancelled and schools were ordered closed Monday.

The storm moved across the Middle Atlantic States and southern New England into eastern Maine during the night after pouring down a foot or more of snow over most of the area earlier in the weekend.

That White Stuff to Stay a While; Mercury's Going to 10-Year Low

To the delight of children and the dismay of motorists Northwest North Carolina's heaviest snowfall since 1948 remained on the ground yesterday and the weatherman said there will be little apreciable melting before tomorrow.

Those who ventured out here yesterday had to brave icy gusts which reached 41 miles per hour and below freezing temperatures. The high Sunday was 23 degrees.

Today the prospects are much the same. It'll be fair, cold and windy.

A seven-degree low was predicted for early this morning. That would be Winston-Salem's lowest reading in over 10 years, the weatherman said.

Of the 7.1 inches of snow which fell Saturday, an average of six inches remained on the ground yesterday, the weatherman said.

Winston-Salem's population increased considerably over the weekend. Snowmen popped up all over the city. They were quite photogenic, too, according to their proud creators whose requests for photographers flooded the Journal and Sentinel switchboard.

Winston-Salem police said that most of the main streets were passable last night but warned that less traveled city streets were still pock-marked with hazardous patches of ice.

City yard crews sanded many streets yesterday but streets froze again last night. Police warned that streets were passable with chains but that extreme caution should be used in driving.

All buses were operating out of Winston-Salem yesterday with some delay in schedules.

Airlines personnel at Smith Reynolds Airport reported that most flights were resumed here yesterday. Some flights to Washington, D. C., were canceled and officials of the airlines said no flights were scheduled north of Washington because of heavy snowfalls.

Long distance telephone lines were swamped again yesterday. Officials of Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company said that all available operators were called in yesterday. They reported that 3,000 or more long distance calls than normal were placed Saturday and an estimated 5,000 more than normal yesterday. Most of the calls were about the weather they said. Some were from persons stranded here by the storm.

Local calls also tied up equipment yesterday, making dial tones slow in many cases.

Troop D headquarters of the Highway Patrol at Salisbury said reports had been received from throughout most of the 15 Northwest North Carolina counties covered by that office, saying that most of the highways were spotted with dangerous patches of ice.

The area's sandmen (not the fairy tale kind who bring sleep) were reported in need of sleep. At 6 p.m. yesterday they had been on duty for 24 hours without a break, trying to ease the driving on highways and streets.

Motorists were advised against travel in the Troop D area which includes Forsyth, Stokes, Wilkes, Surry, Yadkin, Alleghany, Iredell, Catawba, Alexander, Rowan, Cabarrus, Mecklenburg, Gaston, Davie and Lincoln Counties.

The Troop D radio dispatcher reported that winds were blowing freshly scraped snow from highway shoulders back onto the roadway. Sheets of ice on the highways were resulting.

State Highway Patrol Troop C headquarters at Greensboro said icy road conditions were reported throughout most of the 17-county area in central North Carolina.

The cold wave which dumped snow over much of the state gave school children in Northwest North Carolina a holiday for today and possibly tomorrow.

At Boone, which has been covered by snow many times during the winter, snow was reported falling again at 5 p.m. yesterday to add to the seven inches which fell Saturday. Main roads were

Bitter Cold

As the snow tapered off up the coast, bitter cold was left behind, with near-zero temperatures as far south as Nashville and readings of zero or below forecast Sunday night in many parts of the Northeast.

The transportation snarl was one of the worst in years because the weekend's snow came in many areas on top of deep drifts from a storm of a week ago.

Sections of superhighways were temporarily blocked, speed limits reduced and actual speeds cut down still further by icy, drifting conditions.

Power failures harassed many towns and at least nine deaths were blamed on the storm.

Officials used superlatives to describe the effects of the near blizzard — "near" because winds were not quite high enough or the temperatures quite low enough as the snow fell to qualify the storm for that name.

"Wildest of Winter"

The Boston Weather Bureau called it "the wildest coastal storm of the winter."

A veteran airline executive said the tieup of plane travel was "the worst I've ever seen."

Baltimore called it that city's worst snowfall since 1942.

It was the heaviest 24-hour snow New York City had seen in two years, and the most paralyzing in many years.

Elsewhere in the nation it was mostly clear but very cold, with temperatures as low as ~~30 below~~ in the Northern Plains.

A freak blizzard over an area only about 20 miles square around Michigan City, Ind., dropped from 16 to 36 inches of snow.

By contrast, the West Coast enjoyed a comparatively warm weekend.

Snow Measurements

Snow measurements late yesterday from the Eastern storm included up to 18 inches in Virginia, two feet in Pennsylvania's Pocono Mountains, 8.5 inches in New York City, a near-record 15 inches in Boston, 12 inches in New Haven, Conn., 12 inches in Albany and 21 inches at Middleburgh in New York's Catskill Mountains.

The same Catskill area reported its over-all accumulation from the two weekend storms had reached 59 inches late yesterday.

Hundreds of weekend pleasure-seekers were stranded by the storm throughout the eastern area, including up to 1,000 who spent Saturday night at Maryland's Bowie race track, and hundreds of Boy and Girl Scouts in mountain camps.

Through trains were running up to two hours late into New York City, and many factories in the area informed workers that plants would be closed Monday.

The storm, which began Friday off the Louisiana Coast, was ex-

Big Snow Is Huge Joke To People in New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 16 (AP)—When a big snowstorm hits, the typical effete, soft, citybred New Yorker does not huddle over his radiator.

He gets out and enjoys it. He plows around in it, laughs at it, talks about it to strangers and has himself a wonderful time.

Nobody can say why, but a deep snow in the city is a huge joke.

Not to the snowplow man working overtime, of course. And not to the fireman on round-the-clock duty battling a blaze with water that freezes as it strikes. Not to the city official who sees unexpected inroads on his budget. Or to the transit worker who is clearing the elevated tracks when he expected to be home watching television all day Sunday.

But these are the few. The many are secretly or openly and shamelessly delighted with the whole transportation-crippling, impossible situation.

The Sunday worker drags out a long-unused pair of boots, bundles up and tramps a mile to the subway, laughing because his bus wasn't running. Any other time he'd be furious if the bus was five minutes late.

Girls in flimsy boots, not half as high as the snow, single-file through the drifts, giggling. If they slip and fall, they giggle harder.

Husbands and wives leave the warm living room and the television set and wade out into a street untouched by plow or shovel. He takes a picture of her, having a hard time getting her to stop laughing.

A middle-aged man, puny and sick-looking, leaves the narrow path and plows unnecessarily into a drift, shoulders thrown back and a big grin on his face.

A suburban commuter stands outside the station, waiting to see just how the train manages to plow through the drifts over the track. When he gets the answer with a huge wave of snow showering over him, it's funny. He tells everybody about it, and they think it's funny too.

Another commuter tells how he left his car around the corner

Parking Restricted To Clear City Streets

Some 130 parking meters were bagged off as no-parking zones on several downtown streets last night to permit crews to clear ice and snow along streets and curbs.

Traffic Lt. T. A. Surratt said clearning began last night and is expected to be completed today in the temporary no-parking zones where meters were bagged:

On the south side of Fifth Street from Liberty to Trade Street, both sides of Fifth Street from Trade to Cherry Street, both sides of Main Street from First to Third Street, both sides of Liberty Street from Fourth to Fifth Street, both sides of Marshall Street from Fifth to Second Street and all around the Forsyth County Couhthouse on the courthouse side.

Kennedy Is Moved to Permanent Grave

©New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON—Members of the Kennedy family and President Johnson stood together at dawn yesterday for a brief, private ceremony to consecrate the new and permanent grave of President Kennedy.

The service, unannounced and carried out in secrecy, took place at 7 a.m. in a cold, driving rain on the same graceful Virginia hillside in Arlington Memorial Cemetery where Kennedy was buried Nov. 26, 1963.

Ten hours before, in an operation witnessed by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Richard Cardinal Cushing, workmen had moved the coffins of the 35th president and two infant Kennedy children 20 feet downhill from their temporary sites to a permanent monument of granite and marble.

Early yesterday morning, an hour before the cemetery opened to the public, Johnson and 10 members of the Kennedy family — including the two senators and the president's widow, Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy — huddled under umbrellas around the new site as Cushing said a short prayer and blessed the grave.

Johnson had been invited to the service by Robert Kennedy and President Kennedy's widow. During the service, Johnson and the New York senator stood side by side, sharing an umbrella held by a Secret Serviceman who stood behind them.

The two men spoke little, according to associates, but their greeting and subsequent exchanges were not, in the words of one Kennedy aide, marked by "tension."

There have been frequent reports of friction between the two.

The only photographs of yesterday morning's service were taken by Maj. Cecil Stoughton, who once served as President Kennedy's official photographer and is now assigned to the Pentagon.

Besides the President, Mrs. Kennedy and the two senators, others present at the graveside ceremonies were Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy, Mrs. Edward M. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Sargent Shriver, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen M. Smith, Mrs. Patricia Kennedy Lawford, and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara. Mrs. Shriver, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Lawford are sisters of the late president.

As far as could be determined, the meeting between the President and Mrs. Kennedy was the first since Oct. 14, 1964, when Johnson paid an unscheduled call at Mrs. Kennedy's apartment in New York.

Mrs. Kennedy had flown back to New York and Johnson had left by plane for a speaking engagement in Tennessee before news of the ceremony began to emerge. The Pentagon said that neither the transfer of the coffins nor the ceremony was made public because it was a private matter.

Cushing, the archbishop of Boston and an old family friend, said in his prayer yesterday morning: "Be at peace, Dean Jack, with your tiny infants by your side, until we all meet again above this hell and beyond the stars. May the good Lord grant you eternal rest and let perpetual light shine upon you and yours."

The ceremony lasted no more than 20 minutes.

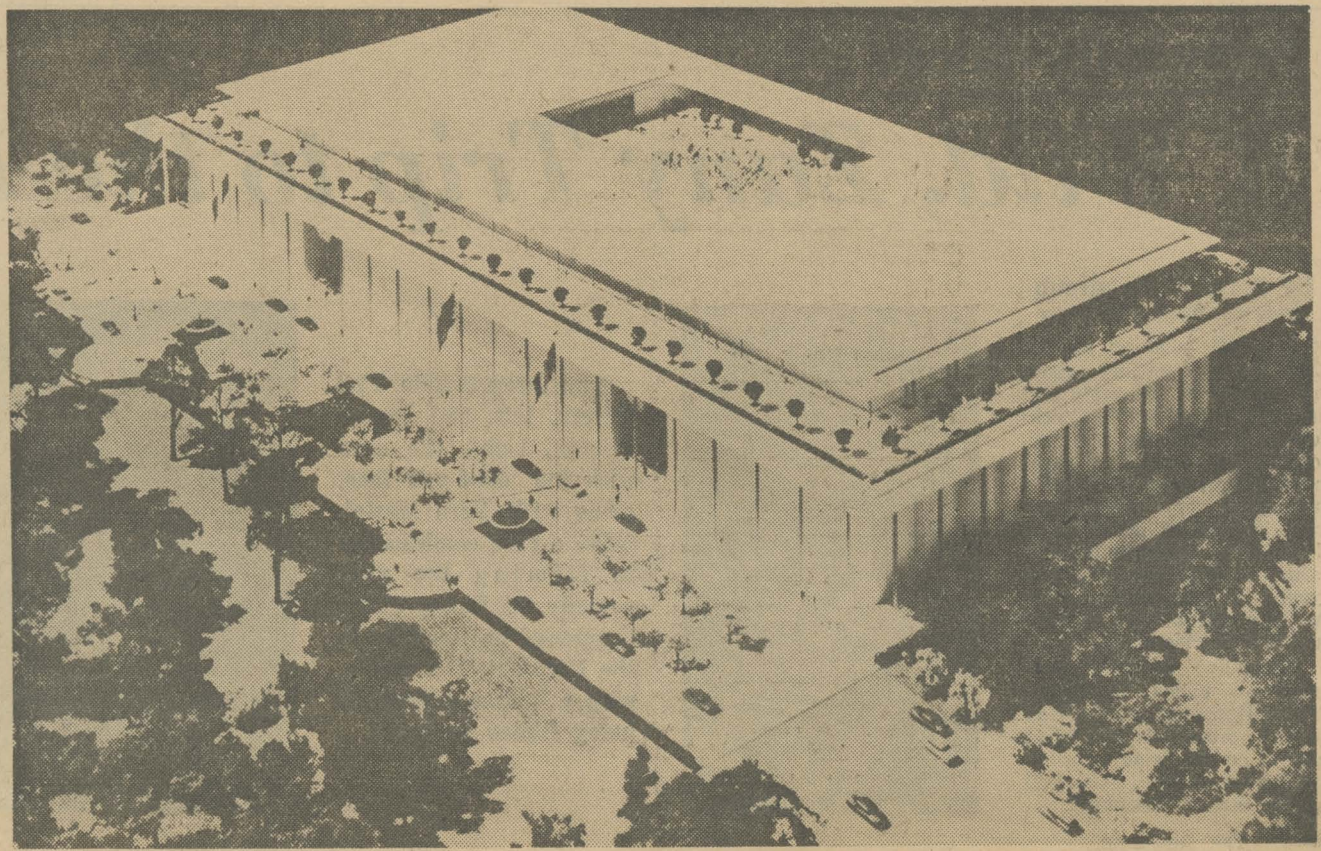

As far as could be determined, Mrs. Kennedy's visit to the grave was her first since May 29 1964, the 47th anniversary of her husband's birth.

The permanent memorial, reached by sweeping stone walks, consists of slabs of roughhewn reddish granite, beneath which lies Kennedy's body.

Eisenhowers Review Highlights of 50 Yeaf Marriage

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower

By Frances Lewine

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Ike and Mamie Eisenhower, looking back over 50 years of married life, have decided "these last years" are the happiest.

For former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, it's because he has more time for such things as exploring supermarkets or painting "anything that intrigues me."

For his wife, the former Mamie Geneva Doud, it's because she has a home of her own for the first time since she married a young Army lieutenant in the parlor of her mother's red brick house in Denver July 1, 1916.

In a rare joint interview, the famous couple reviewed their lives together — the moments of great tragedy, like "the death of our first son," the exciting moments "when we saw our first grandchild," and the great moment "when I was inaugurated as president."

Exciting Experience

Eisenhower said he didn't want anyone to think he was "a downtrodden slave" in the White House. He considered the eight years — the longest they ever lived in one place — "a very thrilling, very exciting, very humbling experience."

He called the White House "a sort of hotel," roomy and nice.

At the interview they had gaiety about them — Ike at 75 and Mamie at 69. They looked younger than their years. As grandparents, they expressed optimism about the youth of America.

Eisenhower said he believed the good, finely educated, understanding youngsters would "take over from the cock-eyed kooks," whose exhibitionist antics "make us look terrible."

Sitting in leather arm chairs in his office on the campus of Gettysburg College, the Eisenhowers took note of the milestones in their lives.

"Gen. Eisenhower," as he is now referred to, did most of the talking. But Mamie often chimed in.

They had a bit of advice amid the nostalgia.

Discussing moral standards, Ike pointed to the lesson of the affluent Roman civilization which he said had disappeared "when licentiousness became habit."

Asked whether he thought Victorian morals should be revived, the former president said, "I don't think the Victorian was really an ideal age." He said he liked the present "more independent style of thinking" because "we are more frank."

And, he suggested, "All of us —schools, churches, parents— must keep re-emphasizing the basic values that have marked any civilization that was still aggressive, strong and virile. When we lose sight of those, then we become jellyfish."

Word for Brides

Mamie had a word for brides. "Times haven't changed," she said, since she was 19 and took her marriage vows with a West Point graduate of 25. "Marriage is something you really have to work at—it just doesn't happen."

Ike acknowledged that marital bickering is a constant factor but "the older you grow, the less important" the quarrels are.

At the home of their son, John, in Phoenixville, Pa., members of the family — as many as can make it — will gather Friday to celebrate the golden anniversary.

The milestone also will be noted throughout the world. Many governors have proclaimed "Eisenhower Golden Wedding Day."

Ike said he had learned from the newspapers that he and Mamie were the first presidential co rate 50 years marria John Quincy Adams wife, Louisa, marke occasion in 1847.

For Mam e "most difficult m o m in the White House" was night Eisenhower suffe stroke in November 1957 and she carred on a scheduled state dinner for the king of Morocco and 80 guests.

"I didn't know whether he was dead or alive," she said of her husband.

Mamie's recital of her ordeal led Eisenhower to tell of his experiences in suffering the stroke, which he called "a confusion of the mind. I just couldn't pick up a pen. I messed some papers off the desk. I went down to pick them up. I didn't know where to put them."

Later, Eisenhower said, "I couldn't use my tongue. You know that it was a terrible blow to me."

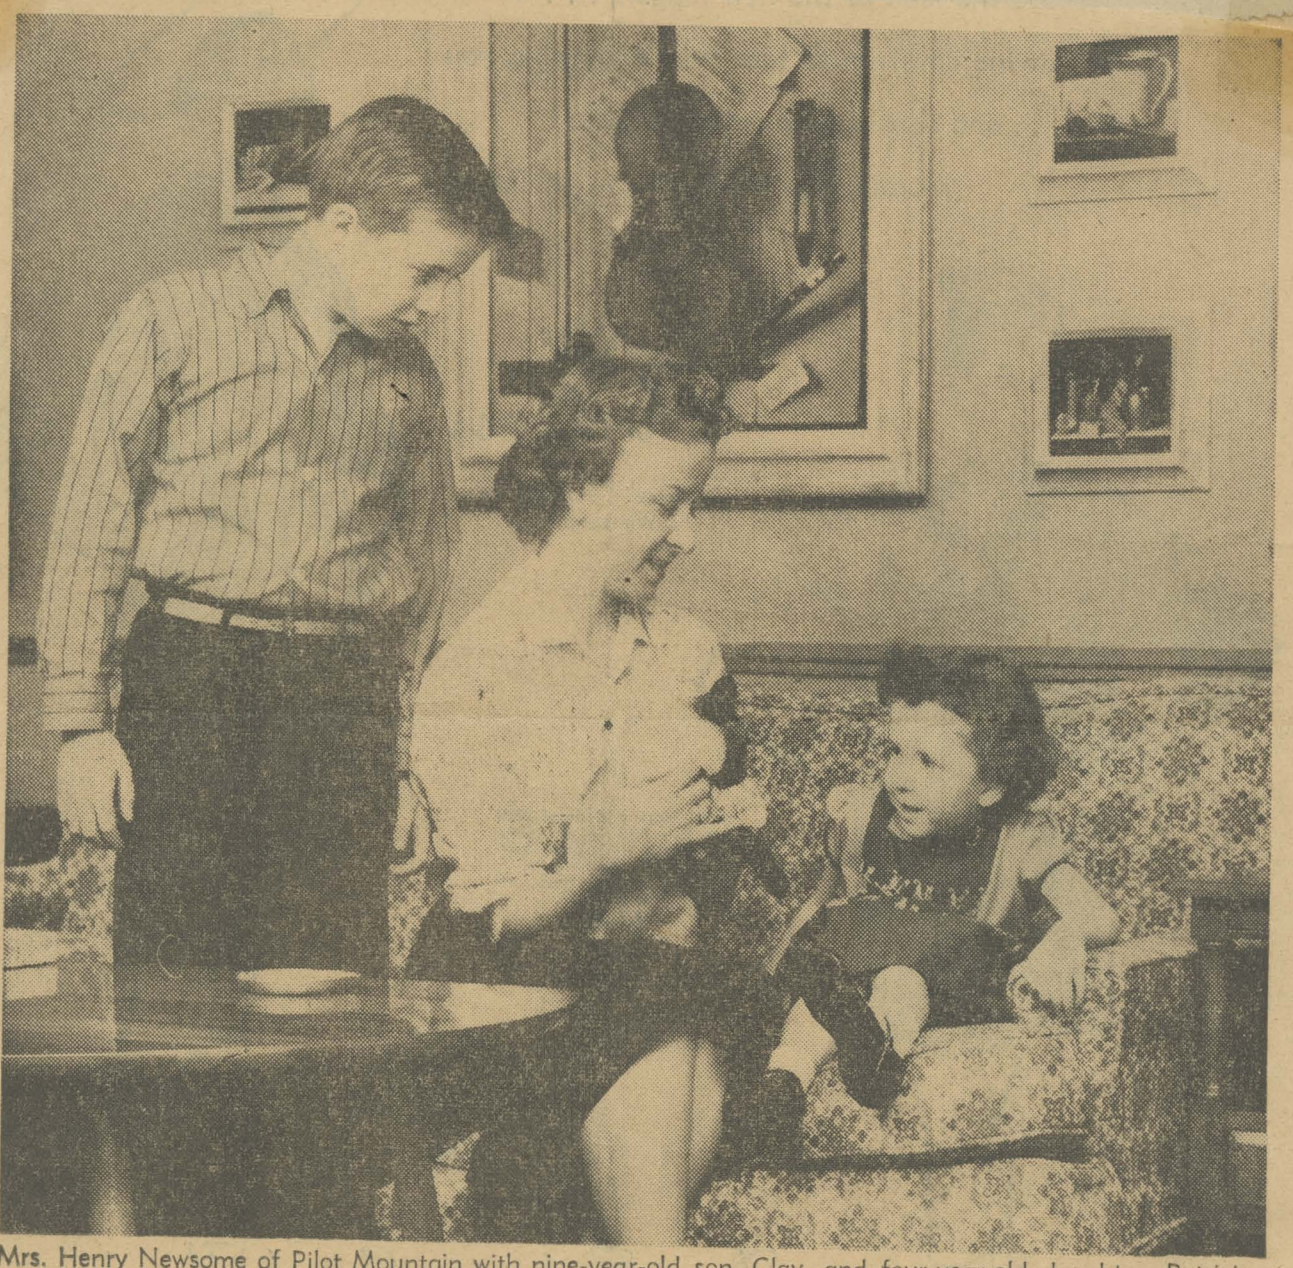

Illness has plagued Eisenhower since he suffered a mild heart attack last fall, and arthritis has impeded his favorite sport, golfing. Though the doctors say "I must play," Ike said, "It's taking me longer to get back." Meanwhile, he notes he exercises by taking walks "in the cool of the morning."

The Eisenhowers now enjoy an unhurried schedule.

Ike is still at his painting, trying anything that intrigues him, whether it's a flower or a portrait. But he said "none of it is any good." Mamie nodded agreement.

Teachers Hear Blegen At Duke

DURHAM (AP). — "The time has come in American education for the scholars of subject-matter specialization and those who profess professional education to seek common ground," a noted educator told the conference on teacher training which opened at Duke University here last night.

Dr. Theodore C. Blegen, dean of the University of Minnesota Graduate School, said:

"Invention, industrialization, the march of science, and the exacting demands of research point, if anything, to greater specialization than ever before. On the other hand, we need urgently, in school and college alike, to forward broad understanding, shared by millions, to make meaningful the basic forces of our civilization, past and present. Our society needs both specialization in skills and integration of knowledge."

Dr. Blegen spoke before some 300 teachers and educators from the southeast at the Duke-sponsored conference which celebrates the 100th anniversary of teacher-training at the college level in North Carolina.

The central problem in settling educational difficulties, he said, "is to drive home the conviction that good teaching is important at every level of education from the cradle to the Ph.D and beyond."

Conference work will be summarized at the meeting's closing session Thursday morning. Final addresses will be made by Duke vice president Paul M. Gross and C. D. Douglas, controller, state department of public instruction.

Adjournment Soon Is Plea of Hoey

By Elearnor Nance
From Journal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON. — The country needs "relief from agitation over legislation," Senator Clyde R. Hoey said yesterday, in expressing the hope that Congress would adjourn during the first week-end in July.

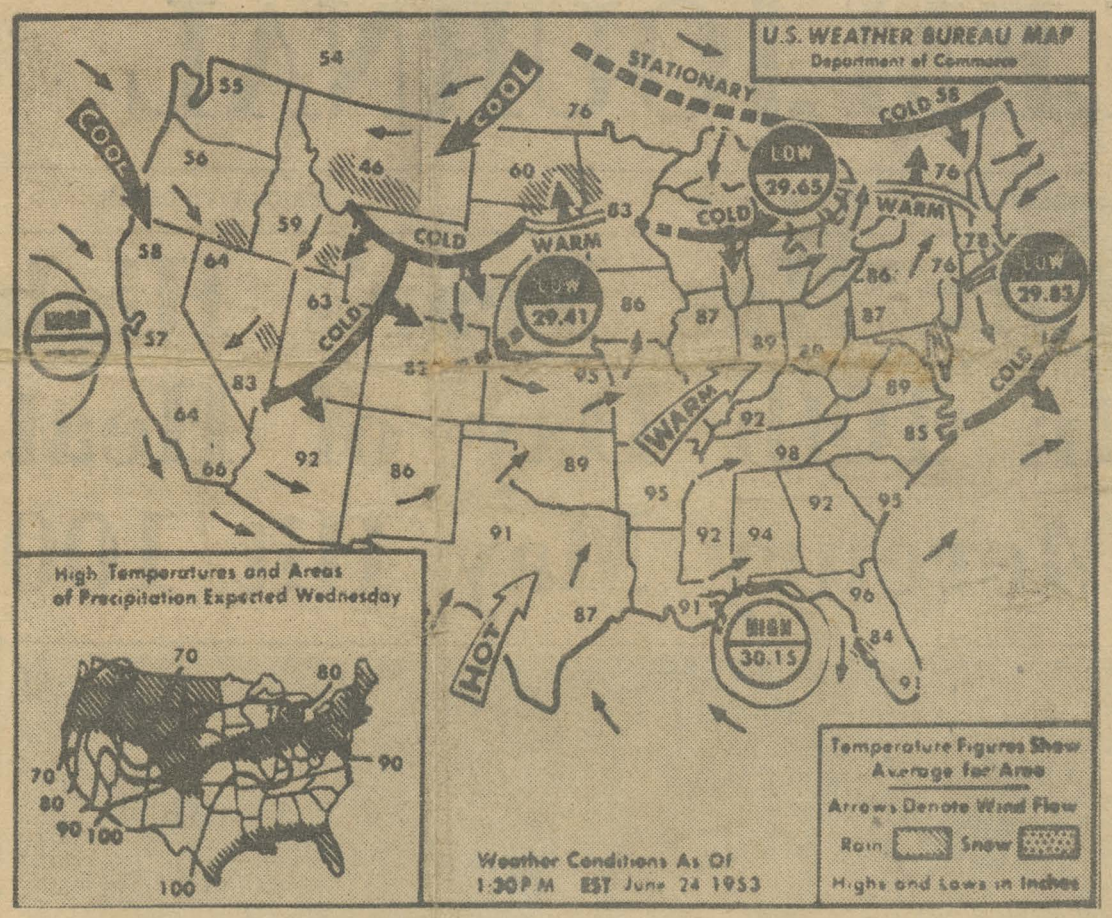

Senator Hoey said he saw "a fairly good chance" for adjournment and that if it appeared final adjournment could be accomplished if the Senate would work through July 4 toward this end.

"All Senators are anxious to get out, not merely for their own relief but it would be good for the country," he said. "The country needs relief from agitation over legislation and the consequential uncertain results from controversial measures. The interests of the country would be served by Congress getting out of session."

PILOT MOUNTAIN — J. Pate Fulk, 78, well-known Surry County retired mail carrier and tax supervisor, was honored at a special ceremony this week for 50 years of service as a Mason.

E. J. Shelton Jr., master of Pilot Mountain Masonic Lodge 493 presented Fulk with the 50-year Masonic pin and certificate.

Fulk has been an active Mason for 57 years, but awards are made on the basis of 50 and 60 years, ...t not for an odd number be...een the 10-year marks.

A native of Pilot Mountain, Fulk was a rural mail carrier for 30 years. After his retirement, he was in the hardware business for several years.

"Then I began another career," said Fulk. He was speaking of his position as Surry County tax supervisor and purchasing agent. He assumed the job in 1940 and held it until his more recent retirement July 1, 1961.

New Career

"Perhaps it's time I started doing something else," he added with a characteristic twinkle in his eyes. But that's all he would say.

Not long ago a female reporter from a county newspaper tried to interview him for a feature story. She later remarked, "I enjoyed talking to him, but I'll have to get my information about him from someone else. He wouldn't talk about himself."

Fulk's Masonic record shows he served as master nine times, 1909-1915, 1922, and 1944. He was also district deputy grand master of the 31st Masonic District in 1914-1915. Fulk has held most of the offices in the local lodge and was previously presented a life membership. He is a York Rite Mason.

Fulk, whose wife was the late Margaret Stewart, has nine children. They are Cyrus Fulk of Pilot Mountain, Hines Fulk of Winston-Salem, Mrs. Everett Kiger of Rural Hall, Mrs. Howard New of King, Mrs. Mattie Moll of Reading, Pa.; Ralph Fulk of Wichita Falls, Texas; Paul Fulk of Washington, D.C.; Pate Fulk Jr. of Raleigh, and John D. Former N.C. Chief Justice, Emery Denny, Is Dead at 80

He was a leading trustee of Karens Memorial

By James Smith

RALEIGH — Emery Byrd Denny of Raleigh, retired chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, died Tuesday at Rex Hospital. He was 80.

The funeral for Denny will be at 3 p.m. today at Hayes-Barton Baptist Church. Burial will be in Oakwood Cemetery.

The former tobacco "plow boy," who read law books in his spare time, was appointed chief justice in 1962 by Gov. Terry Sanford and retired in 1966 at 73.

In 1942, he was named to the high court by Gov. J. Melville Broughton after he managed Broughton's successful campaign for the Democratic nomination in 1940.

Chief Justice William Bobbitt said yesterday that Denny's death "marks the close of a distinguished career, and that his kindly manner and sincere friendship endeared him to individuals in all walks of life."

"Each member of this court feels a deep sense of personal loss," Bobbitt said.

A native of Surry County, Denny was one of 14 children of the Rev. Gabriel and Sarah Stone Denny.

Denny often recalled plowing in his father's fields during daylight hours and studying the few law books he had bought at night.

"I always wanted to study law," he once remarked. "I don't know when the actual decision to study law came, but I must have been mighty young."

Denny's father was crippled in the Civil War and his older brothers had left home making him "plow boy" for the family from age 12 on.

"And actually there wasn't much time to study. Growing tobacco, corn and wheat on that Surry County farm near Pilot Mountain was a back-breaking task," he once said.

He attended Giliam Academy in Alamance County and then returned home to help with the farm work for a couple of years before going to the University of North Carolina where he studied law.

No actual law degree was given at the University of North Carolina when he went there to become certified to practice law.

In 1919, he was admitted to the bar and entered practice in Gastonia with the firm of Denny and Gaston. He later became a member of the firm of Mangum and Denny and continued in this firm until Mangum's death in 1930.

From 1929 to 1937, Denny was

mayor of Gastonia. From 1924 to 1926, he was secretary of the Democratic Executive Committee of Gaston County, and from 1926 to 1928 he was chairman of the committee.

In 1940, he was elected chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee and was chairman until he resigned to become a State Supreme Court justice.

Denny received honorary degrees from the University of North Carolina and Wake Forest University. He was a former member of the board of trustees at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem.

His most recent public service came in 1970 when Gov. Robert Scott named him chairman of a committee to promote passage of a number of amendments to the state Constitution.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Bessie Brandt Brown Denny; three daughters, Mrs. Lenoir G. Shook of Tarboro, Mrs. Bailey P. Williamson of Raleigh and Mrs. Wallace Ashley of Smithfield; a son, Emery B. Denny Jr. of Chapel Hill; and two sisters, Mrs. Roxie Spease and Miss Mary E. Denny of East Bend.

The body is at Brown-Wynne Funeral Home here.

Garland B. Denny Dies, Rites Today

Garland Byrd Denny, 63, of Pilot Mountain, Rt. 1, a retired farmer and former employe of Young's Real Estate Co. in Greensboro, died Wednesday at Northern Surry Hospital in Mount Airy.

He was born in Wilkes County to Leonard David and Martha Key Denny.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Viola Moran Denny; three brothers, Ira K. Denny of Winston-Salem, Phil W. and Reid L. Denny of Pilot Mountain, Rt. 1; and four sisters, Mrs. Audrey D. TOWN IS SHAKEN BY EARTH TREMOR

Oct 18 1969 8 P.M.

The entire town of Pilot Mountain was literally shaken last night as North Carolina felt the tremors of an earthquake throughout her territories.

People of Pilot Mountain and the surrounding area were jolted around 8:00 as the earthquake struck. Lights flashed off and on, telephones were jammed and the people themselves were stunned.

Today, the morning following the quake, there is not much actual evidence of the tremors. Some phones are still out of order, but most of the lights that were off last night came back on immediately. However, the quake remains in the minds of the people this morning. An earthquake in Pilot Mountain! Quite an unusual experience for Pilot Mountain, and though the earth is not gaping, the people are.

Several local citizens commented upon the tremors felt in this area. Everyone seemed to think at the time of the quake that their houses were shaking for approximately one minute. As Clarence Campbell put it, "Seemed like everything was coming loose." Moir Turney stated that there was a "big tumbling and everything shook."

Dillard Hicks of Pilot Mountain said that he was asleep, and never woke up, but his wife was quite amazed at the tremors.

The center of the quake was near Roanoke about 60 miles from here. Many people were quieted immediately following the quake by the news media, who explained the phenomenon.

Though we now know what it was, many people are searching for an answer to why it was. As Reid Gammons expressed it, "Maybe it was those men on the moon who caused it."

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou annointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely, goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

BRIDAL PARTY—Mrs. Joseph A. Pell Sr. (seated) offers coffee to bride-elect Miss Marilyn Burnside, while Mrs. M. G. Burnside (left) and Mrs. G. B. Weaver look on. The coffee was given by Mrs. E. W. Cummings.

Miss Burnside, Bride-Elect, Is Honored at Coffee Here

Mrs. E. W. Cummings of 1738 Virginia Road entertained at a bridal coffee at her home yesterday in honor of Miss Marilyn McCants Burnside of Alexandria, Va., formerly of Winston-Salem.

Miss Burnside will be married to George Arthur Weaver of Albemarle at 4 p.m. Friday in the First Methodist Church of Pilot Mountain, where her mother and father, Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Gwinn Burnside, were married. She and her parents will be guests of her grandmother, Mrs. Joseph A. Pell Sr. of Pilot Mountain until after the wedding.

Arrangements of summer flowers were used throughout the house. A centerpiece of roses was on the buffet table in the dining room. Guests from Winston-Salem included former neighbors of the Burnsides when they lived here at 1031 Wellington Road. Among those present were Mrs. L. B. Leinbach, Mrs. George James, Mrs. Grady Pulliam, Miss Ann Pulliam, Miss Jean Gold and Mrs. Allan Pell.

Other Guests

Guests from Pilot Mountain included Mrs. Pell Sr., Mrs. Burnside, Mrs. Pell Jr., Mrs. Philip Pell, Mrs. P. G. Wall Jr., Miss Emily Wall, Mrs. Ada Gordon Badgett, Mrs. C. W. Patterson, Miss Linda Pell, Mrs. Wilma Snow Swanson, Mrs. A. B. Carson, Mrs. George B. Reid, Mrs. William G. Reid and Miss Margaret Reid.

Other out-of-town guests at the coffee, who are at Pilot Mountain for the wedding, were Mrs. George Baucom Weaver of Albemarle, mother of the bridegroom-elect; Miss Ann Frutchey of Alexandria, Miss Happy Burnside and Miss Nancy Martin of Columbia, S.C.; Mrs. Cam Henderson and Mrs. J. D. Johnston of Huntington, W. Va.

Miss Burnside and Mr. Weaver will be honored at a rehearsal dinner tonight to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Pell Jr. and the parents of the bridegroom. The wedding breakfast at 11 a.m. Friday will be given by Mr. a Mrs. P. G. Wall Jr. of Pilot Mo tain and Mrs. Cam Henderson

Six Children Wed at Once; Town Has Fete

BLENHEIM, Ont., April 28 (AP)—Two by two, by two by two, by two by two—the six Dorssers children marched down the aisle today in a multiple wedding.

They emerged from St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church to be greeted by two brass bands and virtually the entire village population of 2,800.

Four daughters and two sons of farmer Leo Dorssers, with their new husbands and brides, were driven in a horn-blaring procession through streets overhung with colored lights.

The girls, solemn during the ceremony, broke into broad smiles as townspeople lining the sidewalks ignored a sudden thunderstorm to wave and call greetings.

"This is the biggest thing that ever happened here," said a tuba player in the Dutch polka band. "We'll want everyone to remember it."

After receiving the village council's gift of six steam irons, the wedding party headed for a social hall for a 12-hour reception, feast and dancing.

After two months of intensive preparations, the six couples agreed they were looking forward to "a quiet time at last." Three said they would go on short wedding trips. The others planned to go direct to new homes.

All said they "never dreamed of such excitement" when the six-way ceremony was announced. It was by edict of Papa Dorssers, 61-year-old father of 15, who said his farm chores didn't give him time to "run from one wedding to another all spring long."

Despite the complicated arrangements, the ceremony went smoothly. Father Willibrord, Capuchin monk who celebrated the nuptial Mass, asked the overflow crowd in the 500-seat church to be orderly.

Then the six couples, brides in identical white gowns moving up one aisle and bridegrooms up the other, joined hands before the altar rail. It took a total of 40 minutes for the separate exchanges of marriage vows and plain gold wedding rings.

Papa Dorssers, who wore bedroom slippers for the lengthy rehearsal, put on his best shoes today but he balked at making trips back and forth to escort his daughters to the altar. He walked up with the first.

With four unmarried children still living at home, Dorssers said he was in no hurry for any more weddings.

"We have to get over from this one yet," he said. He said the wedding had cost "maybe $800, maybe $900—but I haven't added up all the bills yet."

His plump, grey-haired wife, who said in recent days she barely had time to keep up on her farm chores, wearily agreed.

The newlywed Dorssers are Grada and Ben Luiking; Wilhelmina and Gerald Williamson; Christina and Jack Van Haren; Dora and Bill Vandenberg; Andre and Anne Heuvelmena, and Cornelius and Joan Menheere.

Pilot Mountain's Mr. Ed: He's Ready When Needed

By Jeanette Reid
Staff Reporter

PILOT MOUNTAIN — The best part is "trying to do something for someone . . . something he can't do himself . . . and at a time help is truly needed."

These are the words of funeral director J. E. Needham, now 72, who since 1925 has been in a business which has more than its share of unpleasant duties.

Another pleasant aspect has been getting to know a large majority of persons in Surry and Stokes counties.

"I used to drive up to anyone's house and know everyone there, he expained. "It's harder, now. People move around more."

But Mr. "Ed," as he is most frequently known, still gets around. "He can go longer, work harder, and lose more sleep than anyone else around here," one of his younger fellow workers said.

Whether it's years of practice, or just plain speed, the funeral director also has the reputation of being the first dressed and ready to go when a night call comes in.

His wit, humor, and light-hearted banter make him a wanted companion by young and old alike. His employes recently honored him with a portrait to be hung in the entrance to the funeral home chapel.

Mr. Ed tried several occupations as a young man. He and a partner re-opened a bankrupt furniture manufacturing company at Chase City, Va., in 1911. In 1916, he entered the automobile business.

Next came overseas duty in World War I. He was placed in charge of a military hospital morgue, his first experience in his later occupation.

"You didn't have to be an embalmer there," he explained.

After the war, he was a barber and farmer here.

One morning in 1925, P. Boyd Nelson, who operated a funeral home and mercantile business stopped Needham on the street and offered to sell out.

"I told him I'd have to think about it, and that I didn't have the money," said Needham.

But that night, Needham traded a farm, a lot, and a house for the businesses, which were in a building beside the Bank of Pilot Mountain.

Needham also had a partner in the business, W. R. Cox. The next year the new owners moved to a new location, the site where Surry Drug Company now stands. Three years later Needham bought out Cox, who established the town's only other funeral home.

After almost 20 years in the second location, Needham Funeral Home moved to the old Flippin house in 1957. The house was actually called Dr. "Big Bob" Flippin's home to distinguish it from the home of his son, also a doctor and also called Bob.

Only last March did Needham take another partner. He is Chilton Norman, former insurance company supervisor with previous funeral home experience and a former Winston-Salem resident.

Assisting in operation of the home are two members of the Needham family. Mrs. May Owens, Needham's sister, is the only active licensed female embalmer in North Carolina. C. L. Needham Jr., the director's nephew, is also an embalmer.

"The fact that I've taken a partner doesn't mean that I'm retiring," emphasized Needham. "I'm still active, as much so as anyone else around here. But I'll have assistance with the responsibilities."

In Many Groups

Needham's business career has included active participation in professional organizations.

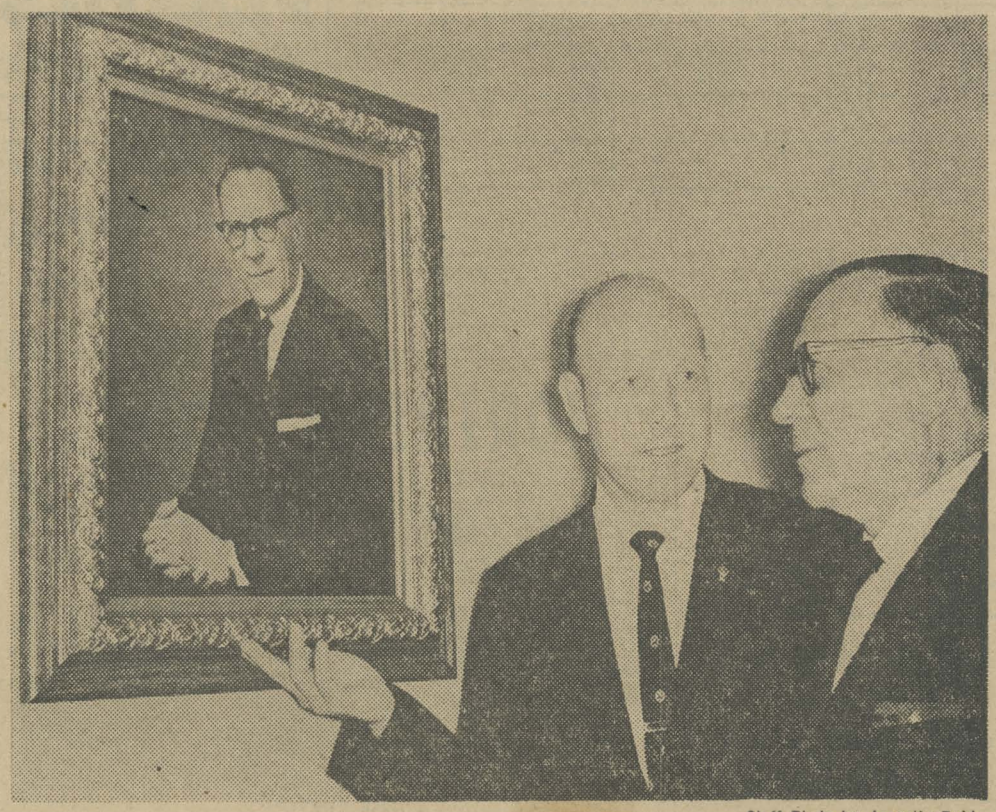

For 32 consecutive years he has attended the annual meeting of the North Carolina Funeral Directors and Burial Assn. He has served as a member of the organization's board of directors and of its legislative committee.

He also served on the North Carolina State Board of Embalmers.

On the local scene, he was a Pilot Mountain town commissioner for five years, a member of Pilot Mountain Baptist Church for 55 years, the Masonic Order for 40 years, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion. A great sports fan, he used to direct baseball among youths here.

He married the former Lona C. Lee in 1922. They have one daughter, Mrs. Tensie N. Young of Chester, S.C., and two grandchildren.

Asked about future plans. Needham explained, "I used to own horses, walking horses and gaited horses. I plan to again."

J. W. Clay Is Honored At Age 80

By Pete Ellis
Staff Reporter

John Wesley Clay was back home on Gun Powder Creek last night.

Well, almost. The creek came to him at his 80th birthday party. Everybody had to cross the creek to get into the lower auditorium of the Centenary Methodist Church.

The creek was a replica arranged on the floor. It had no running water. But there were pebbles from the real Gun Powder Creek in Caldwell County where Clay was born in a cabin 80 years ago March 2. His birthday party had been delayed because of snow.

Mason Swearingen, president of the John Wesley Clay Bible Class, said Clay has been:

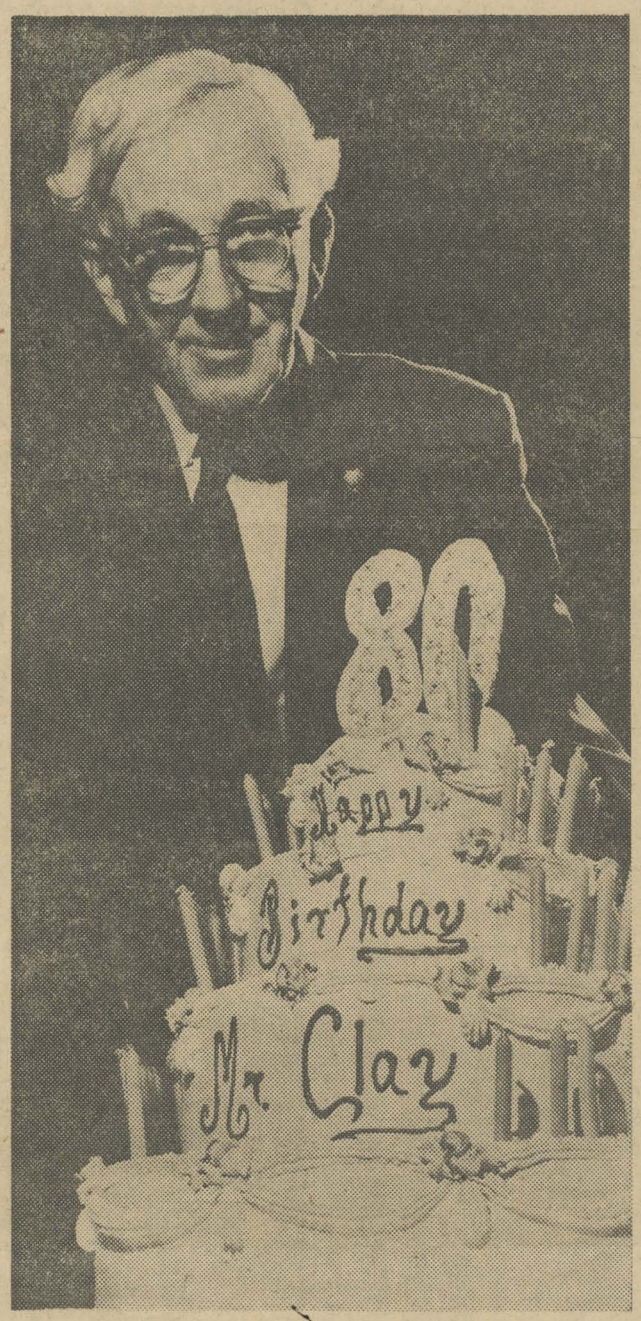

"An adventurer, world traveler, humorist, author of prose and poetry, a printer, naturalist, star of radio and television, scout leader and Sunday school teacher." (Clay writes a column, "My Notions," for the Journal.)

200 Attend

The introduction came after more than 200 men and women of the Bible class organized by Clay 17 years ago ate a chicken dinner. Clay, a southpaw, made the first slices in the four-tier cake. He used a hand bellows to blow out the 80 candles.

Sixteen of the 17 past presidents of the Bible class were among the guests.

Clay was given a standing ovation when he was introduced

The body is at Needham Funeral Home and will be placed in the church 30 minutes before the service.

Mr. Dix died Sunday at Mountain Rest Home at Boone.

MRS. NONNIE REDMAN

Telephone History Is Story Of Development

"When I took over the operation of the Pilot Mountain telephone exchange, the city had 35 telephones and a switchboard that required a lot of elbow grease to keep up the operation."

That was one of the facts that made remiriscensing easy for Mrs. Nonnie Redman, who now occupies a swanky office in the Midkiff Building and whose chief job is to collect monthly bills from more than 900 telephones charged to her division of the Central Telephone Company, which serves a large number of customers throughout the Piedmont area of North Carolina.

My job 26 years ago was to see that customers got telephone service 24 4hours per day. It was hard, since the traffic through the board was not sufficient to provide an assistant. They didn't get that much service but they got as much as a widow with four children, who also had to keep her family going, could provide for what must have been a most understanding clientele.

Personal Service

Mrs. Redmamn started on a round-the-clock operation. Now she works from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. five days per week and has time for her home, her grandchildren, her neighbors and her friends. Proudly sitting in her home is the old switchboard that once upon a time carried good news and bad, stories of tragedies and of gay events, stories of success and failures, stories of hardships and good fortune, sories of brutalities and happiness, appeals for help and a lot of other things. Today the board is a playground for children of a proud grandmother who rejoices in seeing them play make-believe.

It was also a board where personal service was high on the list. When Leonard O. Dudley, erstwhile editor of the Pilot Mountain Post, once at in the Bank of Pilot Mountain—the seat where people sit when they want to see the "man" in the big chair —a long distance call came for him. Mrs. Redman, looking down from her office, saw him. She placed the call for him at the bank instead of his office. He got it a lot quicker that way.

Story Of Growth

During these 23 years of long hours and a lot of magazine reading, Mrs. Redman was told by the Company that they would extend their lines to Pinnacle provided she could obtain 10 customers. She thumbed a ride, got the 10 customers as fast as she could write their applications, and telephone service came to Pinnacle.

Later the Company told Mrs. Redman that if she could reach a certain goal in Pilot Mountain, the Company would install an electric ringer on her "reach and crank" board. She took the trail, came up with the customers and another milestone was reached in the story of Pilot Mountain progress.

Despite what many people, thought in those earlier days, switchboard operators were human enough to want a reasonable amount of sleep. Mrs. Redman's young son, John Robert, had managed to master the fine points of the board and could fill in for his mother and, incidentally launch his career.

"He'd get the earache once in a while and the only cure then was a hot iron," Mrs. Rdman remembers. He'd complain and she would go to the office with the iron.

John worked the board, attended hgh school and was graduated in Pilot Mountain. He went from there to Yadkinvjlle as an operator. Elkin was the next stop. He took over for a time as trouble-shooter before the Company tagged him to manage the exchange in North Wilkesboro. He is now the manager of the Leaksville - Draper - Spray exchange, largest of the company's exxchange.

Gay and Happy

Mrs. Redman is a gay and happy person. Even when people declare they have not made long distance calls that are recorded on automatic machines, she extends sympathy and, when the complaint seems justified, adjustments in the billing. She sent her four children through high school, with one exception and asthma was to blame.

"When do you think you will retire?"

"I don't know anything but work. It certainly would be dull not to have a job. I love it here.

Oldest Active Doctor In State Dies at 97

DR. J. M. FLIPPIN
. . . practiced 77 years . . .

PILOT MOUNTAIN — North Carolina's oldest practicing physician died yesterday after 77 years of doctoring.

Dr. James Meigs Flippin was 97.

In a day in which fewer and fewer doctors of any age make house calls, he kept making them until he was 90.

Dr. Flippin's long practice ended in Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem at 3:15 p.m. He had been ill for quite a time.

Born in Stokes County

Dr. Flippin was born in Stokes County on Dec. 29, 1863, to Dr. Samuel M. Flippin and Ruth Dearmin Flippin.

He did his preparatory work for medical study at the old Dalton Institute at Dalton from 1875 to 1880. His medical training came at the Physicians and Surgeons School, which later became part of the University of Maryland.

Doc Flippin came home to practice medicine. He was in his father's office in Westfield for a time. In those days, the roads were so poor that he had to ride horseback from patient to patient. Later on, he switched to a buggy. He had nearly a quarter-century of doctoring behind him before he bought his first car in 1905.

Practiced in Many Places

On horseback, in buggies and in cars, he'd covered a lot of ground in his practice. He'd hung out his shingle in Pilot Mountain, Mount Airy, Winston-Salem, Salisbury, Baltimore and Oklahoma City.

Once, long years ago, he even practiced among the Indians in Crowder, Okla.

He had been practicing in Pilot Mountain since 1930.

Dr. Flippin performed one of the first appendectomies in the state of North Carolina.

He was a pioneer in use of antitoxins in the treatment of diphtheria.

Some say he was the first mayor of Pilot Mountain. One thing is sure: when a committee there looked around for Pilot's "Man

Henry Shelton

PILOT MOUNTAIN — Henry Shelton, 91, a retired farmer of Pilot Mountain, Rt. 1, died at 5:30 a.m. yesterday at Northern Surry Hospital in Mount Airy. He had been in declining health several years and seriously ill three weeks.

He was born in Surry County to James and Leah Hepler Shelton.

He was married to the former Mollie Lee Whitaker, who died in 1939.

Surviving are two sons, Charlie and General Shelton, both of Pilot Mountain, Rt. 1; a daughter, Mrs. Johnnie Harris of Richmond, Va.; three sisters, Mrs. Sarah Moorefield of Pilot Mountain, Rt. 2, Mrs. Mary Cain of Pinnacle, Rt. 2, and Mrs. Cora Goins of High Point; eight grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Thursday at Whitaker's Chapel Methodist Church by the Rev. Dewey Morrison and the Rev. Gilmer Deany. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

The family will be at the Cox Funeral Home from 7 to 9 p.m. today.

The body is at the funeral home and will be placed in the church at 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

Thomas Ledford Says His Life Was Threatened

A Mount Airy man was arrested Tuesday afternoon on charges of kidnapping a Surry County teenager.

Taken into custody at 4:30 p.m. by Policeman J. W. Vipperma was Arthur Frye, 43, of 50 Penn Street, who is employed i a local furniture factory.

Thomas Ledford, 19, a tena farmer, who resides near the Ste art's Creek bridge on the Mou Airy-White Plains Road, charg that Frye kidnapped him and t him to an isolated area where threatened to kill him.

The incident, according to L ford's statement to local pol occurred on Sunday.

He told police this story:

Frye forced him into an aut mobile at the point of a shotgu at the Hi-Lo Super Market, lo cated on Highway 601, and car ried him by way of Mount Airy to the Buck Shoals Dam, off Highway 52, and that he, Arthur Frye, made threats to kill him.

Police said [illegible] of Ledford's friends saw F[illegible] ave with Ledford and followed Frye's car to Buck Shoals. When Frye saw the boys he reportedly released Ledford.

Frye was released under $2,000 bond at 10:15 p.m. Monday. His bond was signed by Willie Frye and Johnnie Nunn.

Police gave no reason for the alleged kidnapping but hinted that [illegible] something to do with family left after the twister took the roof off the building, hurling tin strips hundreds of yards down a hill.

All along the highway crewmen were repairing disrupted powerlines.

"If you think this is bad," declared Mrs. Lawson, "you should see what it (the storm) did to Carl Dodson's place on down the highway."

This reporter crawled back into the car and moved slowly down the traffic-jammed road to the debris-strewn residence of farmer Dodson.

The first signs of what the tornado had left in its path were hundreds of white chickens standing around a big chicken house which had been blown off its foundation and lay flattened nearby. Hundreds of fowl were crushed under the building.

The big white Dodson barn was in shambles, part of its timbers blown out of sight. This was the area of impact.

The roof and walls, along with heavy center posts of an attached tractor shed and three-car garage, were blown away, leaving only one vehicle slightly damaged. Evidence of the storm's strength could be seen through an adjoining woods and pasture where debris had been carried by the turbulent winds.

Mr. Dodson, who stated his property was covered by adequate insurance, said he felt fortunate that his home and family escaped the storm's violence. The roof was slightly damaged; a cellar door had been torn off its hinges; and a front door screen was folded together.

"We were all inside at the time," Mr. Dodson explained. "My daughter, her husband and the grandchildren all live here. She (his daughter) grabbed the children when the storm hit, but we didn't know where to go or what to do."

Dodson estimated his damage between $12,000 and $15,000. Damage to Tucker's store, which is said to have not been insured, is placed at between $5,000 and $[illegible]000.

River Drive Area Shocked by Impact Of Night's Storm

By BOB TANNEHILL

"The house was shaking...we thought it would fall apart. Outside it seemed a dozen sirens were wailing. My husband grabbed me and I screamed. None of us knew what to do. It was awful!"

Mrs. Alvis Lawson recalled the frightful night before—approximately 9 p.m. Wednesday—when a small but power-packed tornado swept through the River Drive community near Pilot Mountain, along the Elkin Highway. Homes throughout the area were damaged and unknown thousands of dollars damage to farm property and business resulted. A chicken house was blown down, killing hundreds of chickens, and a grocery store was completely demolished.

The young housewife, whose neat white home was lifted from its foundation and moved back several inches, recalled the family's harrowing experiences:

"My two little girls and I had gone to bed and I was asleep when the storm came. My husband awakened me as it hit our house and I screamed. The noise outside was terrible. We were frantic . . . we didn't know what to do."

Mrs. Lawson said at least two inches of water covered the floor of the home. Ceilings and walls will need to be replaced or repaired. A new roof was put on the house Thursday morning by neighbors. The property is owned by Fred E. Chilton of Pilot Mountain who was on the scene.

What the Lawson family saw the next morning from the yard of their home was not a pretty sight.

Big trees were uprooted in the yard of a vacant house across the highway. Next door to them Raymond "Buck" Tucker's Highway 268 Esso Station and grocery store was completely demolished. A big truck parked beside the store had been hurled 30 feet, its muddy wheels bared against the early morning sky.

Behind the house a cow stood silently next to the remains of a barn, parts of which were scattered throughout the pasture. A packhouse had been completely lifted from its foundation and set down across the road.

Back of the packhouse, another, older dwelling, the home of Troy Phillips was empty. The family

Isaac M. Gordon, 92; Banker, Civic Leader

PILOT MOUNTAIN — Isaac Martin Gordon, 92, banker, churchman and civic leader, died of a heart attack about 7 a.m. yesterday at his home here.

He had been active and in apparent good health. He attended church Sunday and addressed Christmas cards Monday.

Gordon apparently died shortly after arising. His housekeeper found him lying on the floor.

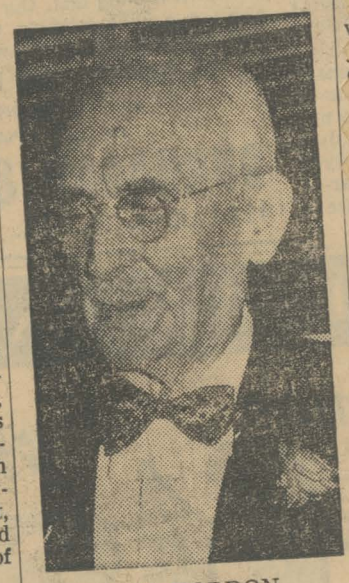

He served as Stokes County's state representative in the General Assembly session of 1905, and also served seven years as a U.S. deputy collector of internal revenue for Western North Carolina. While in federal service he lived in Asheville first, then in Statesville. He served as Stokes County register of deeds 1896-1904.

Before becoming a banker, he was a school teacher and a farmer, and worked a year at Piedmont Warehouse in Winston-Salem.

Gordon organized the Pilot Mountain bank in 1914 and served as its cashier, then as its president.

He was director of the Pilot Mountain Library, served as chairman of the board of First Baptist Church of Pilot Mountain and as secretary and treasurer of the church's Sunday school for more than 20 years, and as Sunday school superintendent for

William H. Reid Dies; Pilot Mountain Banker

PILOT MOUNTAIN — William H. Reid, 95, Pilot Mountain businessman and farmer, died at 1:15 p.m. yesterday after an illness of a year.

He was one of the founders of the Bank of Pilot Mountain, and at the time of his death was vice president and a member of the board of directors.

Mr. Reid was born near Dobson to Irvin and Martha Atkinson Reid. He attended Oak Ridge Academy and had a varied career.

Mr. Reid, who enjoyed telling stories about "the old days," often described how he started work as a plow hand for 15 cents a day. Next he was a carpenter for 65 cents per day, then a saw mill operator.

He later owned and operated a roller mill near Siloam, then sold this and managed Vade Mecum Springs, a resort in the Sauratown Mountain range.

He came to Pilot Mountain in 1906 and had extensive sawmill operations until 1911, when he went into the mercantile business as W. H. Reid & Son.

His first wife was Miss Maggie Apperson of Siloam, who died several years ago.

Mr. Reid died at the home of his son, Richard W. Reid, with whom he had lived in recent months. He had remained active in business affairs until a year ago. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Pilot Mountain.

W. H. REID

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Miss Katherine Reid, of 222 N. Cherry Street, Winston-Salem, and Mrs. Ray Fentriss of Pilot Mountain; four sons — George B., Glenn W. and Richard W. Reid, all of Pilot Mountain, and Paul A. Reid of Cullowhee; and one sister, Mrs. Anna R. Kreeger of Tarboro.

The body is at Cox Funeral Home pending arrangements. The family requests that memorials be made to the church or charity of the donor's choice.

PILOT MOUNTAIN — To be able to look down the long corridors of time that extend across nearly a century with calmness and serenity is the lot of I. M. Gordon, president of the Bank of Pilot Mountain.

He celebrated his 90th birthday last Wednesday with open house at his home on Main Street. Several of his friends called during the day.

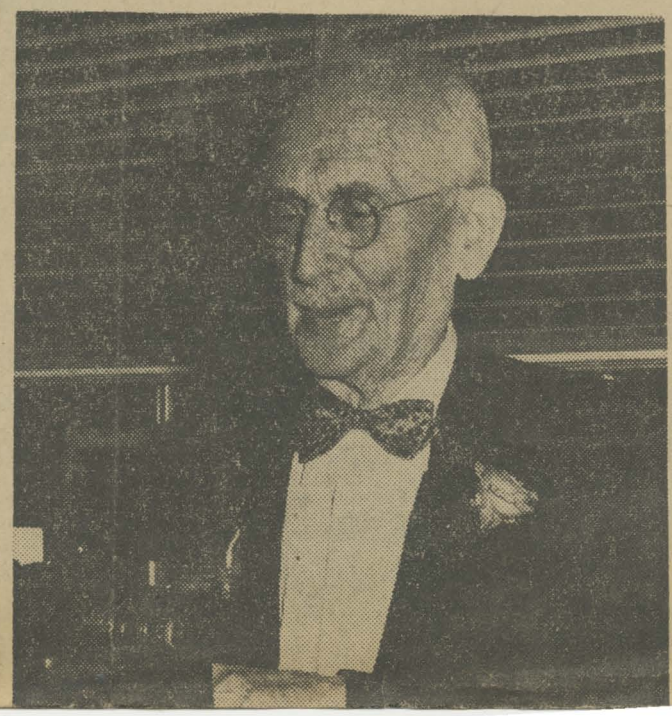

Born in the early days of Reconstruction when privation and poverty rode over a land recently freed from the grip of war, he can recount details of a fruitful and active life. But he far prefers to talk about others.

Gordon was born at the Gordon ancestral home in Stokes County Dec. 21, 1870.

His career began in Stokes County where the chief rewards for endless hard work were food and clothing.

New Facil For Alcoholi Poised To Open

A new home for rehabilitation of female alcoholics is nearing completion at Pilot Mountain and will open about the first of January.

Miss Donna Putnam, a registered nurse from Tabor City, has been hired as manager of the new facility. She has had previous experience in working with alcoholics.

The home is located on the former Camp Wilson property. It was donated by the owners, primarily Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Harris of Pilot Mountain and their sons. Mr. and Mrs. Harris also gave funds for renovating a house on the site.

Men from Hope Valley, an alcoholic rehabilitation center for males at Dobson, are doing most of the remodeling work.

Both homes are non-profit organizations which depend upon contributions for their support. The new home for women can accommodate 12 females.

Boys Camp Replaces Old Resort Springs

By Jeanette Reid
Staff Reporter

PILOT MOUNTAIN—Boys will soon cut summer capers at the foot of Pilot Mountain where old-timers once sat and sipped mineral water.

After lying in obscurity as a farm, a summer resort popular in the early 1900's is being resurrected as Camp Wilson, a private summer camp for boys.

Situated on a beautiful rolling tract between the town of Pilot Mountain and the towering mountain itself, the two main structures of the old resort appear to be two large, ordinary farm houses erected close together.

But as the hotel facilities of Vaughn's Springs they once overflowed with guests:

In the days when people had faith in the health-giving power of mineral springs and natural scenic beauty.

In the days when they would stay for weeks just to enjoy the mineral springs and natural scenic beauty.

In the days when arrival of the Sunday train brought out all the Pilot Mountain townfolks to watch guests arriving and departing.

In the days when mineral water became the vogue—to cure everything from eczema to headaches to what is now called "tired blood" — Gid Vaughn began taking in boarders, and his house became the "hotel."

Even though the interesting beginnings of the house are covered, it is a curiosity. The house started as two two-story log cabins erected side by side and eight feet apart. Sometime, well before 1900, the cabins were weatherboarded, encompassing the area between them. In the eight-foot area was added a stairway.

Business boomed to such an extent that mineral-water drinkers overflowed to Pilot Mountain's old Marion Hotel, now many years gone.

New House is Built

When he continued to have insufficient room for guests, Vaughn built the "new" house, as the family called it, about 1908.

The resort was popular not only among week-long guests, but also among local picnickers. Many Pilot Mountain residents can recall walking over to Vaughn's with a group of young members shipping it out by the barrels.

Exactly what powers the mineral water supposedly possessed, he won't say. But he saw several people for whom doctors had given up hope and other persons suffering from extensive eczema get well.

For many, many years he has operated a seed, feed and staples store on Pilot Mountain's main street. "I never sold anything, including flour, which gave such complete satisfaction —almost 100 per cent—as the mineral water did," he said.

Business Subsides

After Vaughn completed the new house, business flourished for several years. Then the desire for mineral water subsided, Vaughn died, and with a dwindling number of boarders the resort took on a quiet existence.

The property was sold and reverted to a farm.

But it was to the "old" house that a minor crisis in the Vaughn family brought Ida Stephens as a girl of 18.

Although born in Stokes County, she was living near the Vaughns with her family. In 1896, when business was boomjoyment. "I had the prettiest dress I ever had in my whole life while living with Uncle Gid," she added. "I remember it well. It had green flowers on a white background with double ruffles around the skirt. And you know, the material cost only four cents a yard."

While staying at Vaughn's Springs, guests mainly relaxed, ate good food, and drank mineral water, she said.

For entertainment, they sat around and talked, took strolls, played checkers, and enjoyed the view of unique Pilot Mountain rising 1,500 feet above the surrounding countryside.

Asked if the mineral water really improved the guests' health, Mrs. Vaughn said, "I reckon they thought so. They came back the next summer."

After her marriage Mrs. Vaughn and her husband returned to the resort and lived in the old house for six years before buying their own farm several miles away. Now a widow, she still lives on the farm.

As remembrances, she has a most unusual butter dish used to serve guests of the hotel. The amber-colored cut glass dish has a cover shaped like the helmet of a knight's armor. Several people have tried to buy it, but it isn't for sale.

Neither is she interested in selling a patchwork quilt made by Uncle Gid's wife from pieces about a half-inch square.

To Remain Rustic

In fulfilling its new role as a camp, the former resort and recent farm will retain its rustic atmosphere. Renovations and additions are underway to provide necessary camping facilities and modern conveniences for 100 boys.

Located 26 miles north of Winston-Salem, the camp embraces a 50-acre tract just off highway 268 west of Pilot Mountain.

Workmen have already cleaned out the springs, tested it, and certified its purity for drinking.

The main hotel building, or "new" house, will have its 10 large rooms converted into barracks for 40 boys and an infirmary. A three-story well-constructed packhouse is being remodeled as dormitory space for 50 boys with the basement being turned into shower rooms.

And the old house, made by joining the two log cabins, will become the permanent year-round home for the camp's co-director.

Construction of several additional buildings—mess hall, gymnasium and administration building—is underway.

Other Facilities

The dining hall, measuring 30 by 80 feet, will have a stage so that it can be used for camp assemblies as well as for meals. The kitchen will, of course, meet requirements of the State Board of Health.

The gymnasium, 60 by 80 feet, will provide one basketball court running full length and two cross courts for practice shooting. Badminton, volleyball and shuffleboard will be offered also.

In the administration building will be offices, registration area, and camp concession.

A regulation-size football field, baseball field for little leaguers, and two clay tennis courts are also under preparation.

Between the house and mountain will be a man-made lake for swimming. Main features include regulated depth, smooth bottom and an artificial beach of white sand.

Included in the camp's rolling terrain are two fishing lakes, one five acres and the other an acre and a half in size.

The camp, which has two barns left over from its farm days, will also provide horses, riding range, and riding instruction.

Owner of the camp site is Paul O. Wilson, prominent Pilot Mountain tobacconist and warehouseman who is backing the venture. The camp is being named for him.

Opening of the camp will culminate dreams of two men who have worked together many summers in boys camps. They are the camp co-directors—Harold Bradley, head basketball coach at Duke University since 1951, and David Diamont, three-sport coach at Pilot Mountain High School.

For the past several summers Bradley has been program director of Camp Paradise in Maryland, before which he held supervisory positions at camps in the Adirondack Mountains.

Diamont, in addition to association with Bradley in recent summer camps, received recognition for his work in organizing Pilot Mountain's summer recreation program in 1957.

The camp staff will be composed largely of college athletes from North Carolina's Big Four schools. Ages of campers will be 8-18, but high school graduates are not eligible.

On June 15, opening date for the new camp, old Vaughn's Springs with its mineral water will again become a center of summer activity.

Europe Hit By Surging Java Boom

By Henry J. Thornberry

LONDON (UP)—There's a coffee boom in Europe. Nearly everybody is drinking it.

Gone are the wartime days when Europeans had to drink an ersatz mixture of burned barley-chicory sludge with acorn flavoring which had to pass as coffee. Now they have the real thing. And they go for it in a big way.

Evidence of the boom is a streetcar a Copenhagen supermarket chain put on the rails to boost its own particular brand of java. The conductor doesn't sell tickets. He serves coffee to the Danes who average five cups a day. The trolley has turned out to be one of the best-patronized streetcars in Europe.

The shiny, neon-lit Italian "expresso" machine has become a familiar sight in almost every country except Germany. This hissing invention, which pumps out a frothy, somewhat bitter stuff, is credited more than anything else for the increased interest in coffee.

Expresso machines, one of Italy's greatest post-war exports, stand in bars, restaurants and cafes from Austrian ski resorts to London's fashionable West End.

The younger people, especially in Austria, Britain, Italy, Denmark, Holland and France have boosted the expresso trend.

In Britain it has originated a new cult of long-haired, tight-trousered, artistic types who mix coffee-sipping with dancing to "skiffle" music supplied by small groups playing guitars and washboards.

The Germans will have nothing to do with quick-fire coffee-serving methods. Coffee was their currency in the immediate post-war years—and is still to be treated lovingly.

In Germany, coffee is carefully filtered and served, usually with sugar and small pitcher of heavy cream.

In the days when arrival of the Sunday train brought out all the Pilot Mountain townfolks to watch guests arriving and departing.

Small Beginning

Vaughn's Springs, one of several mineral-spring resorts popular in this section about the turn of the century, started with just one house owned and occupied by the Gid Y. Vaughn family. The property was richly endowed with several mineral springs in addition to sulphur springs.

When the fad of drinking mineral water became the vogue—to cure everything from eczema to headaches to what is now called "tired blood" — Gid Vaughn began taking in boarders, and his house became the "hotel."

Even though the interesting beginnings of the house are covered, it is a curiosity. The house started as two two-story log cabins erected side by side and eight feet apart. The resort was popular not only among week-long guests, but also among local picnickers. Many Pilot Mountain residents can recall walking over to Vaughn's with a group of young people as a frequent Sunday afternoon activity in pretty weather.

Belief in the healing powers of mineral water at this time became so great that the water was shipped to all parts of the country.

W. H. Reid, Pilot Mountain merchant and farmer, who managed Vade Mecum mineral spring resort in Stokes County for more than five years, remembers shipping it out by the barrels.

Exactly what powers the mineral water supposedly possessed, he won't say. But he saw several people for whom doctors had given up hope and other persons suffering from extensive eczema get well.

For many, many years he has operated a seed, feed and staples store on Pilot Mountain's main street. "I never sold anything, including flour, which gave such complete satisfaction —almost 100 per cent—as the mineral water did," he said.

"I liked, and they liked. So I stayed," said the perky little lady, now 74. She made her home with them as one of the family for 16 years. Then the family ties became real upon her marriage to Vaughn's nephew, Dave Vaughn.

Her life at the resort she described with liveliness and enthusiasm. Guests mainly relaxed, ate good food, and drank mineral water, she said.

For entertainment, they sat around and talked, took strolls, played checkers, and enjoyed the view of unique Pilot Mountain rising 1,500 feet above the surrounding countryside.

Surry Nursing School To Carry Martin Name

Special to the Journal and Sentinel

MOUNT AIRY, Feb. 23—The name of "Martin," which has long been connected with hospitals in Mount Airy, is being passed on to the town's new hospital.

The Board of Trustees of the nearly completed Northern Surry County Hospital has named the new nurses home and school of nursing "The Martin Memorial School of Nursing of the Northern Hospital District of Surry County."

It is so named in honor of graduates of the nursing school operated in Mount Airy for so many years by Dr. Moir S. Martin—and, of course, for the doctor himself.

The trustees, in naming their new nursing school, said they did it "to perpetuate in substantial form . . . and reflect credit upon" the graduates of Dr. Martin's old hospital and upon the man who operated the hospital more than 35 years.

The old hospital, which burned nearly four years ago, was built by the late Mrs. B. A. Irvin, and Dr. Martin bought it in August 1915.

Dr. Martin, then practicing in Stuart, Va., named it the Martin Memorial Hospital in honor of his father, Dr. R. S. Martin, who was a prominent surgeon and physician of Stuart.

The elder Dr. Martin frequently practiced in his son's hospital in those days.

On May 1, 1918, Dr. Moir Martin opened the Martin Memorial Hospital School of Nursing. Miss Marjorie Snell (now Mrs. B. H. Williamson) was superintendent, and Miss Mary Barrett was the associate superintendent and instructor.

. . . namesake of hospital . . .

The first class graduated in June 1921.

Each year thereafter, until 1953, a new class of nurses graduated from the school.

The student nurses who passed through the school were largely from the area immediately surrounding Mount Airy, and many of them have remained in the community to serve its people.

The trustees observed, "The community is greatly blessed by having many of these fine nurses residing here, many of whom it is anticipated will be serving the new hospital."

The elder Dr. Martin frequently practiced in his son's hospital in the days that followed.

And in 1918, the younger Dr. Martin opened the Martin Memorial Hospital School of Nursing.

For 38 years Dr. Martin operated the hospital until it burned in 1953.

He then led a movement for a new hospital, for which eight townships approved a $500,000 bond issue. Other funds, including $300,000 from the Martin Memorial Foundation, $106,500 from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, and state and federal funds, provided the remainder.

Hospital Dedicated

On March 31, 1957, Gov. Luther H. Hodges dedicated the hospital and nurses home, costing $1,850,000.

Hodges credited Dr. Martin with "invaluable leadership" in obtaining the hospital, "pouring his life, his talents and his dreams into serving health needs among Surry County residents."

When the nursing school for the new Northern Hospital of Surry County was named, it was named Martin Memorial in honor of both Dr. Martin and the graduates of the former nursing school of the same name.

Miss Mary Barrett, head nurse of the first school opened in 1918, said yesterday, "Dr. Martin was such an inspiration and such a leader . . . We felt so free to confide in him. The student nurses always looked upon him as a close friend."

Miss Barrett and Mrs. B. H. Williamson, first school superintendent, helped open the school and graduate its first class of five nurses. By the time of the fire, the school had graduated 250 nurses.

Dr. Martin served as chairman of the new hospital trustees during the planning and construction stages, resigning only after its completion so he could return to practice. Hospital by-laws prevent a doctor from serving on the board if he is practicing medicine.

At the time of his resignation he was made Chief of Surgical Services Emeritus.

Dr. Martin was also active in financial affairs.

He had been president of Workmen's Federal Savings and Loan Assn. since 1939, a director of the First National Bank for the past 25 years, and a director of the Patrick County Bank of Stuart, Va.

"He was a man who understood finances," said A. B. Carter, attorney of Workmen's Federal. "As head of our association he did a wonderful job. A lot of our recent growth can be attributed to Dr. Martin and the directors who worked with him."

D. C. Rector, president of First National Bank, said, "He was one of the most public spirited men I've ever known. He was a director for 25 years and one of the most loyal . . . He was interested in everything for the betterment of the community."

As an example of his interest in schools, Dr. Martin for 35 years was chairman of the Mount Airy Board of Education. He resigned in 1957.

"He was a man who contributed much to education. His influence was widespread, not limited to this area," said Supt. B. H. Tharrington.

"His wise leadership was a major factor in the progress of the schools. He was interested in the welfare of all children." Tharrington added.

Surry Nursing School To Carry Martin Name

Special to the Journal and Sentinel

MOUNT AIRY, Feb. 23—The name of "Martin," which has long been connected with hospitals in Mount Airy, is being passed on to the town's new hospital.

The Board of Trustees of the nearly completed Northern Surry County Hospital has named the new nurses home and school of nursing "The Martin Memorial School of Nursing of the Northern Hospital District of Surry County."

It is so named in honor of graduates of the nursing school operated in Mount Airy for so many years by Dr. Moir S. Martin—and, of course, for the doctor himself.

The trustees, in naming their new nursing school, said they did it "to perpetuate in substantial form . . . and reflect credit upon" the graduates of Dr. Martin's old hospital and upon the man who operated the hospital more than 35 years.

The old hospital, which burned nearly four years ago, was built by the late Mrs. B. A. Irvin, and Dr. Martin bought it in August 1915.

Dr. Martin, then practicing in Stuart, Va., named it the Martin Memorial Hospital in honor of his father, Dr. R. S. Martin, who was a prominent surgeon and physician of Stuart.

The elder Dr. Martin frequently practiced in his son's hospital in those days.

On May 1, 1918, Dr. Moir Martin opened the Martin Memorial Hospital School of Nursing. Miss Marjorie Snell (now Mrs. B. H. Williamson) was superintendent, and Miss Mary Barrett was the associate superintendent and instructor.

. . . namesake of hospital . . .

The first class graduated in June 1921.

Each year thereafter, until 1953, a new class of nurses graduated from the school.

The student nurses who passed through the school were largely from the area immediately surrounding Mount Airy, and many of them have remained in the community to serve its people.

The trustees observed, "The community is greatly blessed by having many of these fine nurses residing here, many of whom it is anticipated will be serving the new hospital."

Dr. Martin was born in Stokes County Jan. 20, 1883, the son of Dr. Richard Saunders Martin and Emma Moir Martin. He received his early education at the Danville Military Institute, Danville, Va.

After attending Hampden-Sydney College in Virginia, he received his medical degree from the Medical College of Virginia, Richmond, in 1905.

Two years later he married Miss Emma West.

The young physician was practicing medicine at Stuart, Va., in 1915 when he bought the local Irvin Hospital, changing its name to Martin in honor of his father, who was then a prominent surgeon at Stuart.

I. M. Gordon Obse s 90th Birthday De 1

I. M. Gordon, president of the Bank of Pilot Mountain, who will cedlebrate his 90th birthday Wednesday, December 21, will have an informal open house at his residence between the hours of 4 p. m. and 5:30 p. m. in the afternoon and from 8 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. in the evening. No formal invitations will be issued but any of Mr. Gordon's friends who would care to do so are invited to come by the home either in the afternoon or the evening to greet him.

Mr. Gordon will be happy to see all of his friends but he requests that none of them bring gifts.

I. M. GORDON

I. M. Gordon Obs 90th Anniversary Here

To be able to look down the long coridors of time that extend across nearly a century with calmness and serenity is the lot of I. M. Gordon, president of the Bank of Pilot Mountain, who celebrated his 90th birthday Wednesday, December 21.

Born in the early days of the Reconstruction era, when deprivation and poverty rode over a land recently released from the grip of war, he can recount details of a fruitful and active life, but he far prefers to talk about others.

Mr. Gordon was born at the Gordon ancestral home in Stokes County December 21, 1870, barely five years after General Lee had surrendered the Confederate armies to General Grant near Richmond and General Johnston surrendered to General Sherman near Durham in North Carolina.

His career began in Stokes County where the chief rewards for endless hard work were food and clothing.

For 26 years he farmed, taught school and got all of the education that was available at the he received the main portion of his formal education. He pays tribute to both of these teachers and their contribution to the area.

Tobacco Business

"I helped to manage the Piedmont Tobacco Warehouse in Winston-Salem. In 1896 the Winston-Salem tobacco market averaged between six and seven cents for the season, although we raised some fine tobacco. I came to the conclusion that I should get out of the tobacco business," Mr. Gordon said.

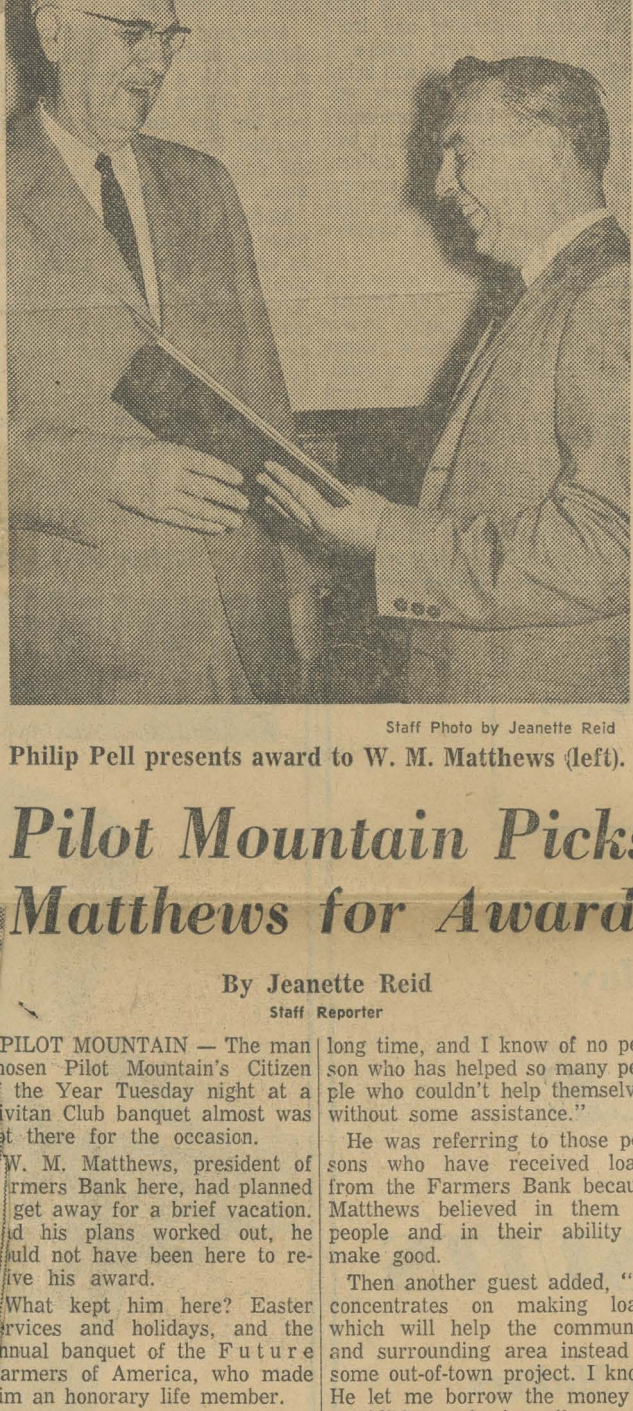

And he did.

He entered politics.

In 1896 he was elected register of deeds in Stokes County, an office he held for four successive terms before he was elected to the North Carolina House of Representatives in 1904.

"I married Miss Mary Oliver in 1904 and we spent our honeymoon in Raleigh where I served in the House of Representatives," Mr. Gordon related.

In a field of 20 contestants Mr. Gordon stood the required examination for the post of U. S. De-

PILOT MOUNTAIN — The man hosen Pilot Mountain's Citizen the Year Tuesday night at a ivitan Club banquet almost was t there for the occasion.

W. M. Matthews, president of rmers Bank here, had planned get away for a brief vacation. d his plans worked out, he uld not have been here to re- ive his award.

What kept him here? Easter rvices and holidays, and the nnual banquet of the Future armers of America, who made im an honorary life member.

Philip H. Pell, Civitan president who announced the new recipient, said, "The man we are honoring tonight is civic-minded, has been for many years, and still is a church worker, a Sunday School teacher, a deacon in the First Baptist Church and a member of the local school board for many years."

He also listed Matthews' contributions as president of the trustees of the N.C. Baptist Home for the Aged, Winston-Salem and as a board member of the Pilot Mountain Public Library.

The plaque which the honoree received read: "Awarded to W. M. Matthews for this outstanding service in stimulating better citizenship for the year 1959 by the Civitan Club of Pilot Mountain."

Past recipients of the award are Edward Elliott, Sidney C. Patton, Dr. J. M. Flippin, John C. McKenzie and Warren Stone.

After the presentation, a guest remarked, "I have lived here a long time, and I know of no person who has helped so many people who couldn't help themselves without some assistance."

He was referring to those persons who have received loans from the Farmers Bank because Matthews believed in them as people and in their ability to make good.

Then another guest added, "He concentrates on making loans which will help the community and surrounding area instead of some out-of-town project. I know. He let me borrow the money to establish my business."

Born just outside of town, Matthews received his education at the University of North Carolina and the University of Toulouse, France.

After service in World War I and working two years in banks at Winston-Salem and Elkin, Matthews returned to Pilot Mountain and with W. J. Byerly and W. R. Badgett established the Farmers Bank in 1920.

The banker is active in professional organizations.

He and his wife, the former Miss Hessie Johnson, have one daughter, Mrs. Lydia Farnsworth of Pilot Mountain, and one grandchild, James.

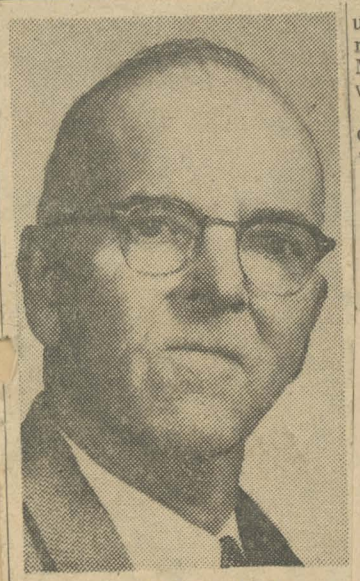

At 67, the active banker and community leader has "no plans for retiring."

Guest speaker for the banquet, attended by 70 persons, was Robert Clodfelter of the Trust Department, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., Winston-Salem.

3,500 PAY FINAL RESPECTS TO RE

Church, Tobacco, Business Leader Succumbs Friday

REV. D. D. HODGES

Throngs estimated at 3,500 paid their final respects Saturday and Sunday to the Rev. Delmar Hodges, 59-year-old resident of Lowgap Road, Route 6, Mount Airy.

One of this section's best-known Baptist ministers, the Rev. Mr. Hodges succumbed Friday evening at 6:45 o'clock at Baptist Hospital, Winston - Salem. Death resulted from injuries he had sustained in a traffic accident Sunday afternoon, June 19.

The wreck occurred on N. C. Highway 89, about four miles east of Mount Airy. The Rev. Mr. Hodges, severely injured, was rushed to the Winston - Salem hospital, where he remained a patient until his death.

Mr. Hodges sustained a broken back in the accident, causing paralysis from his waist down. Late last week, he contracted pneumonia.

Returned to Moody Funeral Home in Mount Airy, the body of the well-known tobacconist, warehouse operator and businessman remained at the funeral home until placed in Woodville Baptist Church Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. A near-steady stream of friends, relatives and business associates filed into the funeral home to pay their last tribute.

Woodville Baptist Church was filled to overflowing long before the two o'clock hour of the funeral. The Rev. Mr. Hodges had served as pastor of that church for approximately 15 years.

Conducting the funeral services were the Rev. Glenn Mendenhall, pastor of Oak Grove Baptist Church; Elder Jess Dunbar, and the Rev. Joe Maye of Hillsville, Va., former pastor of Flat Rock Baptist Church.

Burial, with Masonic rites, followed in the cemetery of Oak Grove Baptist Church. The Rev. Mr. Hodges had preached his first sermon after being ordained as a minister in that church approximately 27 years ago.

Pallbearers were Masons: J. W. York, Monroe Johnson, Grover Holder, Roy Tolbert, Sammy Holder, Emmett Allen, Billy Gray Hawks and N. A. (Bill) Lowe. Ministers were honorary pallbearers.

Prior to accepting his call to the pulpit of Woodville Baptist approximately 15 years ago, he had served as pastor of Antioch, Holly Springs and Blue's Grove churches. He conducted special services at various other Baptist churches.

Ordained to the ministry in 1939, he preached his first sermon at Oak Grove Baptist and returned on numerous occasions thereafter to hold revival services. His first pulpit was that of Blue's Grove.

Retired Pastor Writes His Philosophy In Poem

The following poem, "A Prayer," was written by Pilot Mountain's beloved minister, the Rev. John D. Smith, retired Presbyterian pastor. Rev. Mr. Smith has written a great many poems. Part of this poem was used on the bulletin for last Sunday's service at the Pilot Mountain Presbyterian Church, where Rev. Mr. Smith preaches during the absence of the present pastor, the Rev. Burris Bender. Mr. Smith's sermon was "Consider the Lilies of the Field."

Rev. Mr. Smith will also preach next Sunday morning and the title of his sermon will be "Be Level Headed."

A PRAYER

Lord, let me sing another song before my silent day,
And let me pray another prayer, before I go away.
I'd like to do another deed to some one down and out,
Then let me lend a helping hand to some one round about.

O, let me speak a cheerful word to some one in distress,
I'd like to give a little gift to some one who has less.
Let me compose another verse, before I cease to write,
I'd like to write a line that's here, when I am out of sight.

Just let me have a helpful thought, while I am so still on earth,
For I have done so many things that are of little worth.
O, let me do one single deed with which I'm satisfied,
May I just have a little cheer, while I still here abide.

May I just say a word of cheer to one who's very sad,
Or may I write a line or two, that helps to make him glad.
Help me to think of other folks, and not of self alone,
Then may my thinking help some way till all my days are gone.

May I, too, help some burdened soul, and make his burden light,
Help me, O Lord, to do this thing, till I am out of sight.
I've made some great mistakes in life, which I regret,
May I yet do a worthy act, before my sun is set.

Then use my tongue and use my pen, in thine own blessed cause,
May I not do one single thing for this old world's applause.
Yes, let me say another prayer for this whole blessed world,
Before I reach for Canaan's shore, and pass the gates empearled.

I'd like to go see my friends, before I cease to walk,
I'd like to say a word to them, before I cease to talk.

File As Deadline

Gardner Files For Judge; Snow, For Stat
Senate; And Swift For Sheriff As Actio
On Surry's Political Scene Shows Increas

Action increased this week on the Surry County political scene as the filing deadline of 12 o'clock noon today drew ever closer.

Carroll F. Gardner, Dobson attorney, filed yesterday (Thursday) as a candidate for judge of Mount Airy's Recorder's Court, subject to the May Democratic primary.

He will oppose the incumbent, Judge H. H. Llewellyn of Mount Airy, who recently filed as a candidate to succeed himself.

Other action in the upcoming Democratic Primary will see two three-man races.

George K. Snow, Mount Airy attorney and assistant judge of Mount Airy's Recorder's Court, filed Tuesday as a candidate for the Surry-Stokes State Senate seat.

He will oppose the two other announced candidates, J. N. (Buck) Freeman of Mount Airy and Livingston Williams of Elkin.

Joseph W. Swift of Mountain Park filed Tuesday as a candidate for Surry County Sheriff. He will oppose the incumbent, Sheriff Neal Thompson, and Hudson F. Graham, both of Pilot Mountain.

The only other race thus far among the Democratic nominees is for a seat on the Surry County Board of Education. Last week, Loyd Snow of Copeland filed as a candidate to oppose Cecil Ring, also of Copeland, the incumbent member.

Other incumbent members of the county school board who have no opposition are Joe A. Pell of Pilot Mountain and Dr. Joe Folger of Dobson.

Others who have announced their candidacy subject to the May Democratic Primary are William G. Reid, State House of Representatives; Buck White of Mount Airy, M. C. Whitener of State Road and Howard Hardy of Siloam, County Commissioners; Charles Randleman, solicitor of Mount Airy Recorders Court; Kermit Lawrence, clerk of Surry Superior Court; Roy Willard, constable of Mount Airy Township; and J. Earl Ramey of Mount Airy and C. M. Voris of Toast, justice of the peace.

Mr. Gardner

mary. I feel that my training and educational background qualify me for this position. If elected to this office, I will strive to the utmost of my ability to discharge the responsibilities of this office in a fair and impartial manner.

Mr. Snow

Mr. Snow issued the following statement:

"I shall ever be grateful for every honor which has come to me in life and am deeply appreciative of the trust and confidence the people of Surry County have placed in me in sending me to the House of Representatives in Raleigh two terms and it was an honor to give my efforts in behalf of the 23rd Senatorial District in finishing up Hon. Fred Folger's term in the State Senate in 1959. I worked hard on each of these occasions and am proud of the record I made in them.

"Quite a number of people have encouraged me to offer myself as a candidate for the State Senate in the 1962 primary and after giving the matter careful thought and consideration I have filed as a candidate for this office on the Democratic ticket. I fully realize that this office is important to the people of this County and District and feel that since this will be my fourth term in the General

Mr. Gardner

Mr. Gardner, 27, is a native of Surry County, the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Gardner, Route 2, Dobson.

He was graduated in 1952 from Copeland High School as class valedictorian. In September, 1952, he enrolled in Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va. and was awarded an academic scholarship. While at Lynchburg College, he was an honor student.

After completion of two years at Lynchburg College, he entered military service and served in the Army Security Agency as an Army Cryptographer in Munich, Germany for 17 months.

Following his discharge from military service, Gardner enrolled in Wake Forest College in September, 1956 and was graduated from that college with a BA degree in 1958 and from Wake Forest College School of Law in 1960. He was an honor student in law school while at Wake Forest College.

After his graduation, he was admitted to the practice of law in September, 1960 and became associated with his brother, John C. W. Gardner, and Wilson Barber in the practice of law. For the past two years, he has managed the Dobson office for this firm.

Mr. Gardner has been very active in the community and civic life of Dobson since he moved there in 1960. He is a member and director of the Dobson Lions Club, chairman of the Greater Dobson Area Red Cross blood bank program, a committeeman of the Surry Central Recreation Association and was recently elected president of the Surry County Tuberculosis Association. He is also active in Boy Scout work in Dobson.

Mr. Gardner is married to the former Barbara Chapman of Belfry, Ky. and they have one son, David Gerald.

Mr. Gardner made the following statement yesterday concerning his candidacy: "I am announcing my candidacy for the office of Judge of the Recorder's Court subject to the Democratic Primary.

I fully realize that this office is important to the people of this County and District and feel that since this will be my fourth term in the General Assembly I would expect much more important committee assignments than would be the case if this were my first or second term. This would enable me to be of more service to the people of the District.

"There are many important issues to come before this 1962 General Assembly, among which is court reform, long past due and Senatorial redistricting of the State. I have given these matters a great deal of thought and feel that I could contribute to their reasonable solution.

"I believe that in the matter of service to the people of the County and District I can serve them well and if nominated and elected I shall ever give ear to the voice of the people as I have always done in the past. Support of Democrats in the coming primary will be appreciated."

Big Bids Expected For Bible

LONDON (AP)—Five yellowing leaves from a seventh century Latin script Bible brought the world's top book buyers scurrying into London Sunday.

For America's oldest Biblical manuscript goes under the hammer in Sotheby's auction rooms Monday.

Wealthy New Yorker John Flemming, who bids for books as if every comma were gold dust, flew in on an early plane.

He was followed by New York rival Hans P. Kraus, who paid out $294,000 when the world record for a single day's book sales was broken in London last December.

$912,800 Changes Hands

The take was 326,000 pounds—$912,800—that day and Sotheby officials rubbed their hands in anticipation of another astronomical session as buyers from the United States and Europe poured into the British capital.

The prize manuscript is part of the collection of the late Otis T. Bradley, once a leader of the New York bar. Its scribe's identity is lost in the mists of time, but some of the most affecting gospel stories are told on its few pages.

There is the story of the fig tree which Jesus Christ made to wither, the story of the leaves and fishes and of the walking on the sea.

Only the Latin scholar can now read the script in the original, but it is viewed here as among the rarest collectors' items ever offered for sale at public auction.

Fantastic Battle

Until the arrival of Fleming and Kraus, there was a general possibility the rare manuscript would be lost forever to the United States.

Dr. Lawrence Host To Heart Council

Dr. Ben J. Lawrence, president of Northern Surry Heart Council was host to the council members on Friday evening at 6:30 o'clock at Powell's Restaurant.

Devotionals were given by Dr. Lawrence.

Those present besides the host were Mrs. Edward W. Jones, Mrs. James Nichols, Audrey Moore, Mrs. Joe Powell, Mrs. William H. Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. Eric Jarrell.

Following a four course steak dinner a business meeting was held presided over by the president.

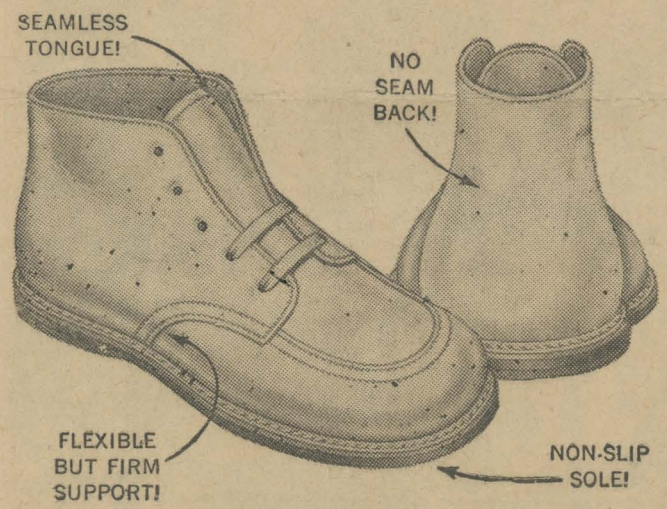

All council members were reminded of their duties and a general discussion was held of all events of the past year concerning the activities of each heart council member.

Tentative plans were made in order to make the February Heart Fund Drive a success.

The dining area was decorated by Mrs. Joe Powell. The table held green hurricane lamps entwined with red poinsettias and was centered with an arrangement in a hogarth design, using Ilex Mahonia and green grapes with red candles. A hanging star with baubles was used in the decorations. A Christmas tree fully decorated was also used in carrying out the Christmas motif.

A January dinner meeting to be held was also announced by the president.

J. Pate Fulk

J. Pate Fulk was truly a gentleman and a public servant of the old school. He was quiet, most efficient and, for the most part, did not raise his voice in anger, choosing instead to make his point by discussion and logic.

"Mr. Pate" served his home town of Pilot Mountain well. He served his county equally as well. His list of attainments run from serving as mayor of our neighboring town to the south to serving as county tax supervisor and purchasing agent. Too, he was a retired rural mail carrier and had also been a railway mail clerk.

He was an active member of the First Baptist Church of Pilot Mountain and the church's Walter M. Matthews Sunday School Class. He also enjoyed his membership and participation in the Senior Citizens Club of Pilot Mountain.

Active in the Pilot Mountain Masonic Lodge, he served as master of the fraternal organization on nine occasions and at one time or the other had filled most of the other offices in the lodge. He was also a past district deputy grand master of the 31st Masonic District.

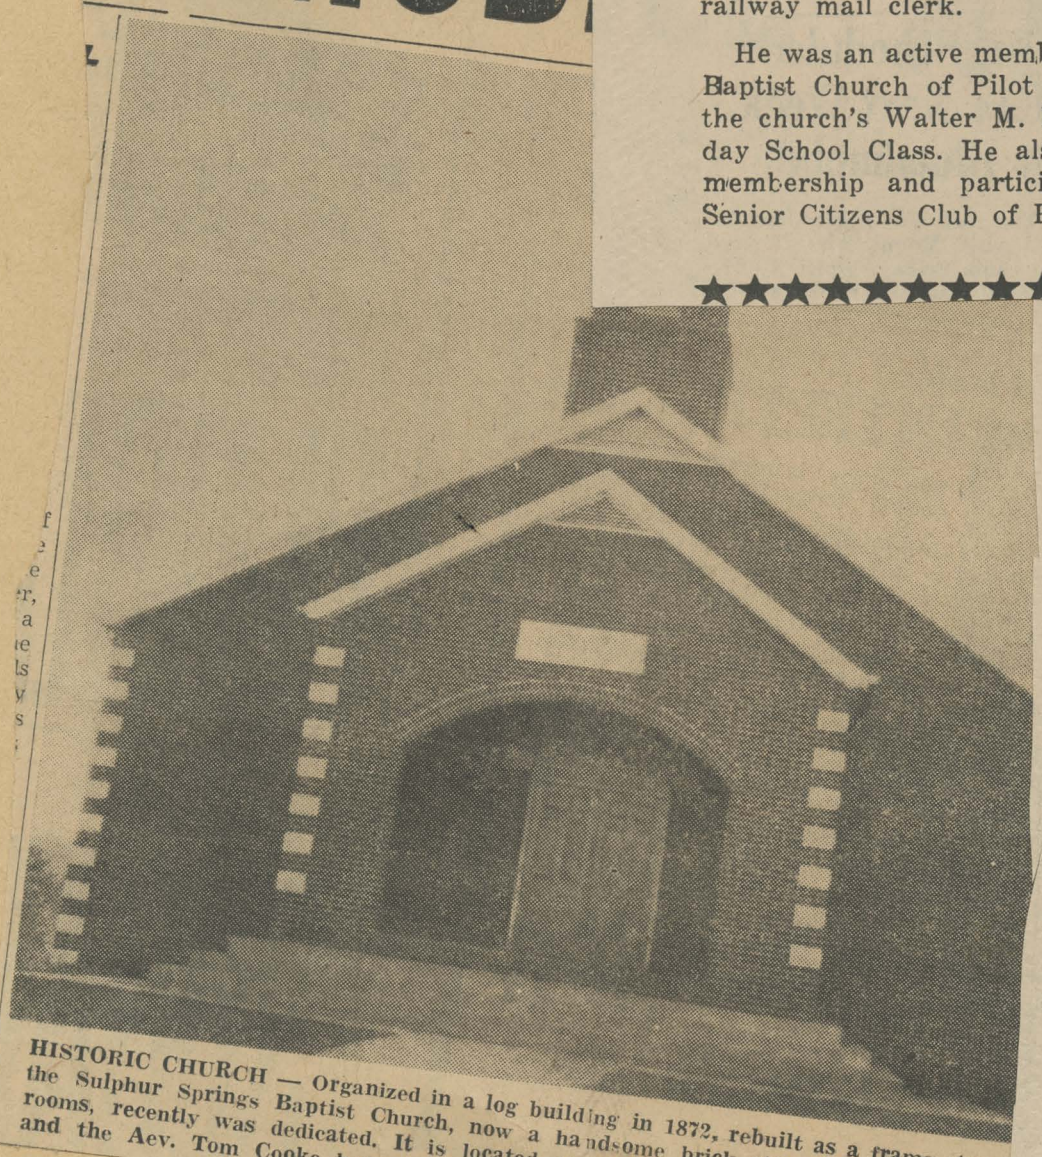

Mr. Fulk had seen his town and county progress from a largely agricultural area into one with bombing industry and business, creating more diversified forms of income and greatly increasing the area's economic base. He had witnessed and been a part of the changes that economy and progress bring.

Death claimed John Pate Fulk last Friday at Forsyth Memorial Hospital in Winston-Salem. He was 88. With him passed another link with the past that has become history but has had such an important bearing on the present and even future developments.

PILOT MOUNTAIN. — Miss June Jacqueline Flinchum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Flinchum of Pilot Mountain, became the bride of Onyx Bynum Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Miller of Walnut Cove, on Sunday, Dec. 20, in the Sulphur Springs Baptist Church.

The Rev. Tom Cook performed the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Hassel Miller, pianist, and Mrs. Kent Swanson, soloist, presented wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a waltz-length gown of Chantilly lace designed with an empire collar, and the bouffant skirt was edged with a cascade ruffle of tulle. Her finger tip veil of tulle was caught to a halo of lace and pearl and she carried a white Bible with an orchid.

Miss Betty Martin was maid of honor. She wore a red gown of net over taffeta with matching stole and headdress and carried a bouquet of white carnations showered with red ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Miss Kay Flinchum and Miss Joyce Flinchum, sisters of the bride. They wore mint green dresses of taffeta and carried bouquets of red carnations.

Mr. Miller was his son's best man. Ushers were Dalmer Flinchum of Pilot Mountain, brother of the bride; Hassel Miller of Walnut Cove, brother of the bridegroom; William Kreeger and William Midkiff of Winston-Salem.

After a wedding trip to Florida the couple will live at Walnut Cove. For travel the bride wore a beige suit with brown accessories and an orchid corsage.

Mrs. Miller is a graduate of Pilot Mountain High School and attended High Point Business College. Until recently she was employed in the office of Granite Hosiery Mill at Mount Airy.

Mr. Miller is a graduate of Walnut Cove High School and is employed by Piedmont Airlines at Winston-Salem.

MRS. ONYX BYNUM MILLER

TO MAKE HOME IN HIGH POINT—Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Pierce, both Pilot Mountain and Su..ry County natives, will make their home in High Point where Mr. Pierce is connected with the advertising department of the High Point Enterprise, and Mrs. Pierce is with the nursing staff of the High Point Memorial Hospital. The Burge-Pierce marriage was solemnized Friday evening, August 13 at the Whitake..'s Chaper Church in Pilot with the Rev. Gilmer Denny officiating. Mrs. Pierce is the daughter of Mrs. E. P. Burge and the late Pate Burge, and Mr. Pierce is the son of Mrs. Pearl D. Pierce and the late L. T. Pierce.

Elder G. O. Key Was First Pastor Of Pilot Mt. Primitive Baptist Church

The land on which the Pilot Mountain Primitive Baptist Church now stands, at the intersection of Main and Elkin Highway, was donated by Mr. Dan Venable, and in 1896 the present structure was erected by the Fisher's River Association.

Its first pastor was Elder G. O. Key, the late O. J. Denny was Clerk, and meetings were held on every first Saturday and Sunday of each month. On September 1, 1899, Elder George Denny was elected Moderator to assist Elder G. O. Key.

Following pastors were Elders C. B. Denny; O. J. Denny; Luther Tucker; C. W. Stowe; Geo. Denny and W. H. Worrell.

Present pastors are Elders Jesse Collins and Fletcher Beasley.

The Fisher River Association was held at the Pilot Mountain Primitive Baptist Church, July 9-11, and representatives from several states and many counties were present. Approximately fifteen hundred were present during the three-day meeting.

At present the church has seventeen members, and Mrs. Coley Venable is the present Clerk.

Words Of Appreciation

W. M. Johnson,
Editor Mount Airy News

I want to thank you for the writeup, and the copies sent me. I certainly do appreciate it very much, if I did have to live 87 years to get my name and picture in the paper.

Eighty-seven years sounds like a long time, but it doesn't seem long since I had to get up early in the morning and go down a steep hill, barefooted, and bring up water for the day so after breakfast all hands could go to the field and work till dark to make a bare living. It was in a day that if you didn't make it, you didn't eat.

I realize that I am living far toward the sunset, and from this on I must reckon only with the future. If I have fought a good fight it will be answered by my children and friends. If there be laid up for me a crown of righteousness, can only be answered in the mercy and judgment of my REDEEMER.

This old house that I have been living in so long is becoming dilapidated and I fear that I will have to move out soon. The important question is not how soon, but where to from here.

[illegible]king you and with [illegible]am,

Long-Time Principal At Mount Airy Dies

DOBSON — Arthur Franklin Graham, 59, of Dobson, Rt. 2, for 37 years principal at Copeland School in Mount Airy, died at 7:15 p.m. yesterday at City Hospital in Winston-Salem after suffering a heart attack. He was at the hospital visiting his daughter, Mrs. Edwin Atkinson of Siloam, a maternity patient, when he was stricken.

Mr. Graham served longer at one school than any principal in North Carolina history. He was the only principal of Copeland High School from its founding in 1924 until it was consolidated into Surry Central High School in 1961.

Mr. Graham taught at Surry Central a year before he retired at the end of the past school year.

Wofford Graduate

Mr. Graham was graduated from Wofford College in Spartanburg, S.C. He became principal of the Surry County school shortly after his graduation.

J. Sam Gentry, superintendent of Surry County Schools, commented in 1959, "Not only has Copeland been enriched, but also all parts of North Carolina, as graduates influenced by him (Graham) have spread throughout the state."

The Surry County unit of the N.C. Education Association presented Mr. Graham with a life membership in the National Education Association for "long service, successful teaching, and community service."

ARTHUR F. GRAHAM

Howard Hardy of Siloam, a Surry County commissioner at the time, said in a tribute to Mr. Graham after he had completed 35 years of service, "Doing something for others has been the theme of his life . . . and he has molded himself into the lives of the people of the community."

In addition to Mrs. Atkinson, Mr. Graham is survived by his wife, the former Mary Ellen Houch.

His daughter and his wife are teachers in Surry County schools.

The body is at Moody Funeral Home in Mount Airy pending completion of arrangements.

PILOT MOUNTAIN—Miss Lee McKenzie, 19, a sophomore at Greensboro College, won the title of Miss Pilot Mountain late Saturday night to climax a local beauty pagent.

Miss McKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. McKenzie of Pilot Mountain, played the piano in the talent division of the contest.

First runnerup was Miss Jeri Lawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Lawson. Second runnerup was Miss Jane Hart. Miss Lawson is a teacher at Appalachian State Teachers College and Miss Hart is a student at East Tennessee State College.

A Christmas parade in the afternoon started the festivities. Participating bands were from East Forsyth, East Surry, J. J. Jones of Mount Airy and Hillsville, Va., high school bands.

Winning prizes in float contest was the Cub Scouts under Raymond Nelson, who received $50 for first place, and the Methodist Youth Fellowship of First Methodist Church, which received $25 for second place.

The reigning Miss North Carolina, Miss Jeanne Flinn Swanner of Graham, was guest for both the parade and the pagent.

Sponsoring the event was the Pilot Mountain Junior Chamber of Commerce. Edward N. Swanson, Jaycee president, was coordinator for the events. Committee chairman included Jerry Jones, James Belton, Joel Kiger, Roger Reeves and Sam Bryant.

Miss McKenzie's prizes included a $250 scholarship from 10 local professional men, a winner's trophy from P. G. Wall Co., a crown, a $100 wardrobe and an expense-paid trip to the Miss North Carolina pagent.

Miss McKenzie, who is majoring in piano, plans to get a masters degree in music and study drama. At Greensboro College, she has appeared in three productions by the GC Players. While at East Surry High School she was head cheer leader, a member of the debating team, Masque and Gavel, Mixed Chorus, Future Homemakers of America and Beta Club.

Contestant consultants were Mrs. James Dew, Mrs. John Peddicord and Mrs. Joel Kiger.

RITES HELD FOR MRS. PRATT

The funeral for Mrs. Eliza Chandler Pratt, 102, of Pilot Mountain, formerly of Pinnacle, Route 1, was be at 2 p. m. Saturday, July 3, at Volunteer Primitive Baptist Church. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Pratt died at 1:05 a. m. Thursday at the home of a daughter, Mrs. E. E. Hart of Pilot Mountain.

She was born in Stokes County to David and Celia Gordon Chandler. Her father worked at an iron forge near Pilot Mountain making tools and weapons during the Civil War.

During most of her early life she "had to live on what was made at home" and the only news was "stagecoach news," coming by horse-drawn vehicles from Salem to Mount Airy.

Five of six of Mrs. Pratt's brothers and sisters lived past 90. She attributed her longevity to "faith in the Lord." She said people today work too little and eat too much.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. D. E. Oats and Mrs. H. N. Mangum of Greensboro; three sons, Charlie Pratt of Pilot Mountain, Gordon Pratt of Greensboro and Jesse Pratt of Pinnacle; 35 grandchildren; 80 grandchildren; and 38 great-great-grandchildren.

DONNIE S. GORDON

The funeral for Donnie Stone Gordon of King, Rt. 1, who was killed Friday night in an automobile accident, will be at 2 p.m. today at Needham's Rural Hall Chapel. Among survivors is a daughter, Mrs. Cina G. Blue of Charlotte.

MRS. LAURA MITCHELL

WATCH for OPENING

PSALM 23

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou annointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely, goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

R. L. Berry; Retired Minister

SPARTA—The Rev. Robert L. Berry, 69, a retired Presbyterian minister of Sparta, died at 4 a.m. yesterday at Alleghany Memorial Hospital after an illness of three months.

He was born in Washington County, Va., to John S. and Nannie King Berry and attended Davidson College.

Berry graduated from King College at Bristol, Tenn., where he was a letterman in football and baseball. In 1920 he graduated from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va.

Berry's first pastorates were in Stokes and Surry counties. He was the only surviving charter member of the Winston-Salem Presbytery.

He was pastor of Flat Rock Presbyterian Church at Mount Airy 11 years and of Sparta Presbyterian Church for nine years. He was pastor of Belmont Presbyterian Church 10 years and of Oxford Presbyterian Church two years.

Berry then returned to Sparta and Glade Valley churches, where he was pastor eight years before his recent retirement.

During his first pastorate at Sparta, which began in 1935, Berry was chairman of the local tuberculosis fund and the Red Cross. He helped organize a Boy Scout troop and held services at the prison and CCC camps at Rocky Ridge and Glade Valley, in addition to his regular work at Sparta Presbyterian Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Dovie Jane Berry; a son, Robert Allen Berry of Lancaster, S. C.; five grandchildren; three sisters, Mrs. Fred Thomas and Mrs. J. R. Thompson, both of Abingdon, Va., and Mrs. Frank Keller of Bristol, Va.; and three brothers, John, David and William Berry, all of Abingdon, Va.

The funeral will be conducted at 3 p.m. today at Sparta Presbyterian Church by Dr. R. H. Stone and Dr. John Luke. Burial will be in Sparta Cemetery.

The body is at Reins-Sturdivant Funeral Home and will be placed in the church at 2 p.m. today.
