

HUGH CHATHAM
MEMORIAL HOSPITAL
ELKIN, NORTH CAROLINA

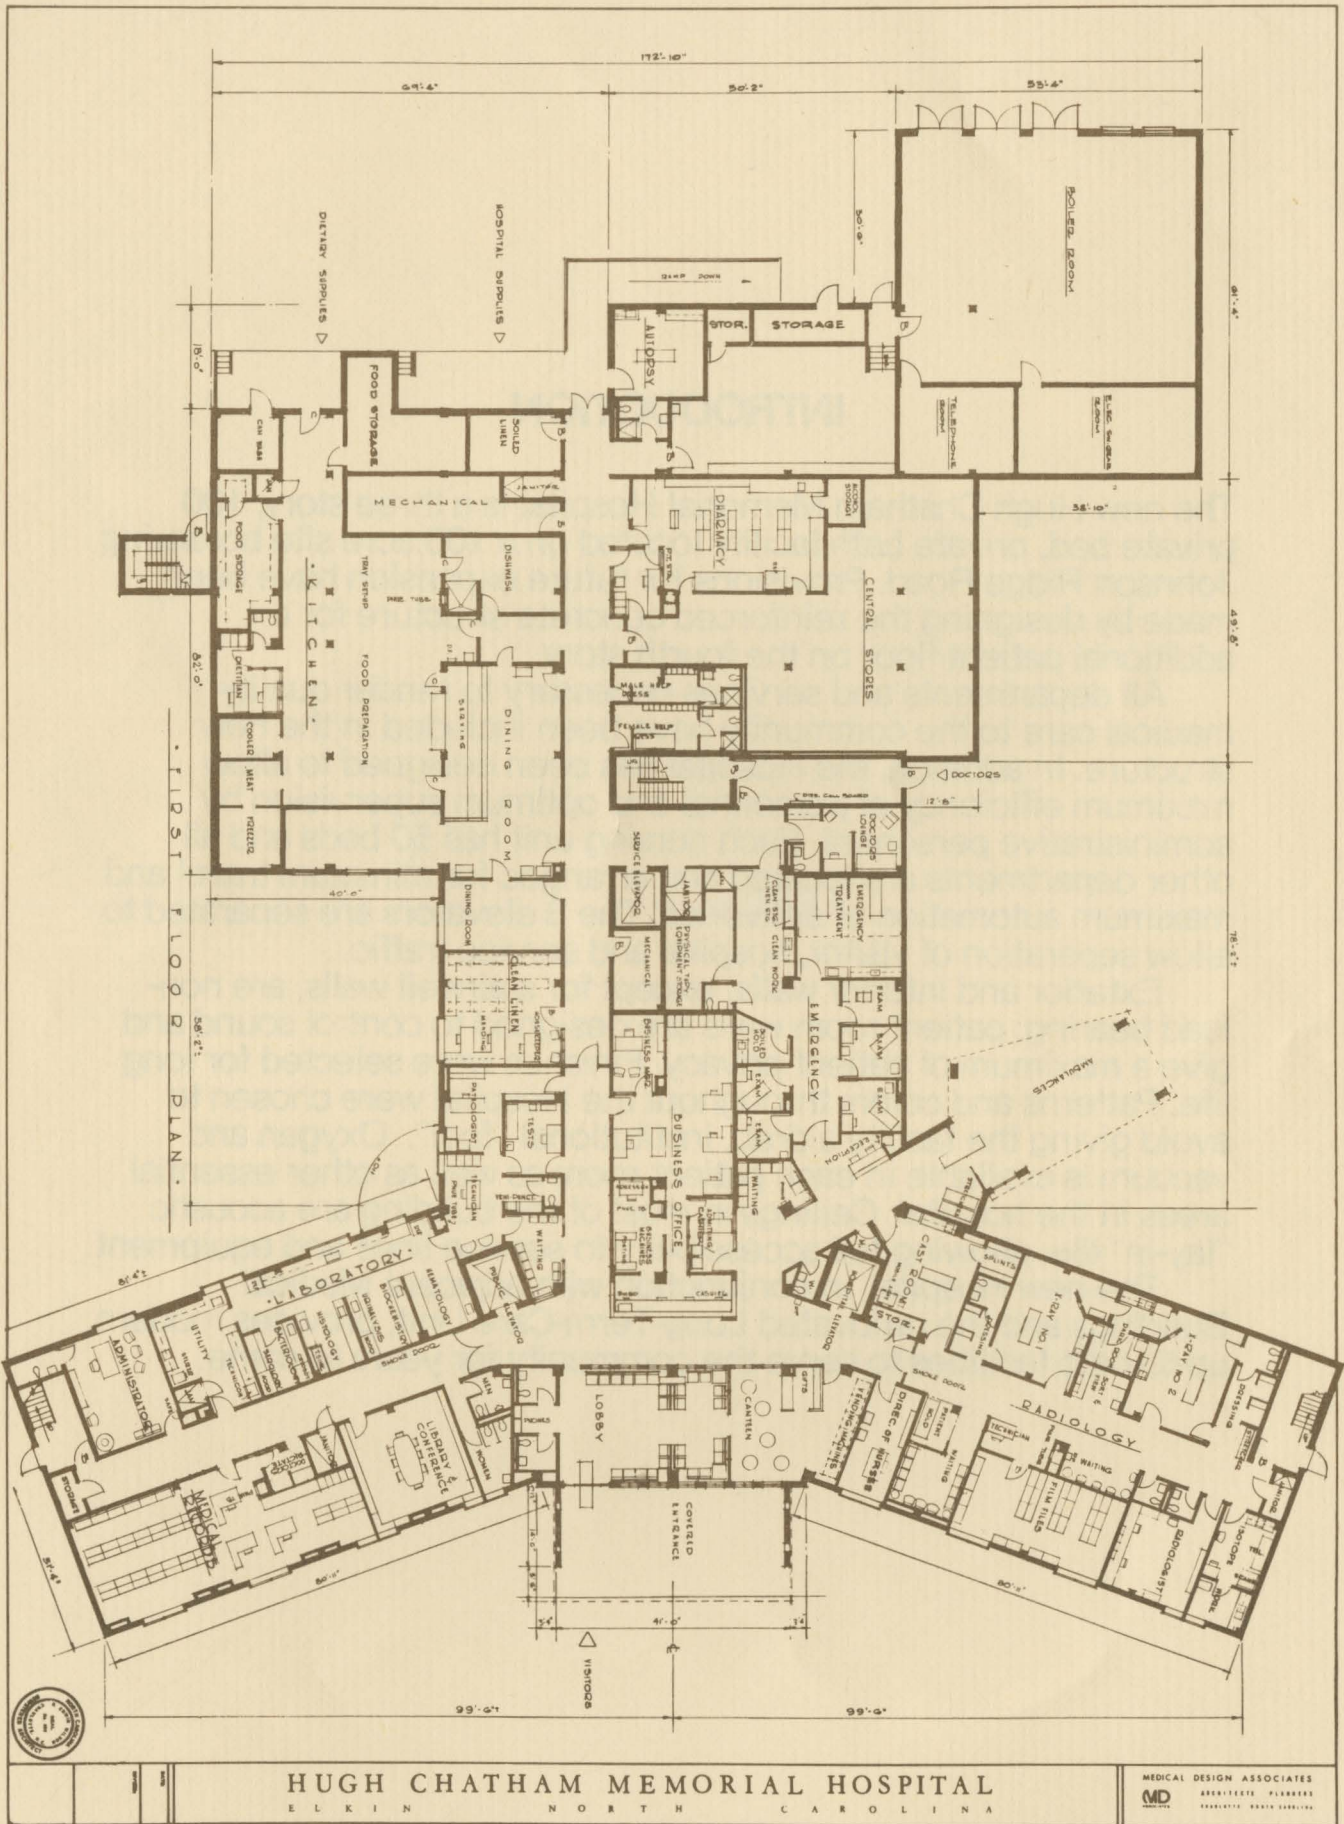

INTRODUCTION

The new Hugh Chatham Memorial Hospital is a three story, 100 private bed, private bath facility located on a 105 acre site bordering Johnson Ridge Road. Provisions for future expansion have been made by designing the reinforced concrete structure for an additional patient floor on the fourth story.

All departments and services necessary to render quality medical care to the community have been included in the new structure. In addition, the Hospital has been designed to allow maximum efficiency of personnel and optimum supervision by administrative personnel. Each nursing unit has 50 beds and all other departments are located and arranged for minimum travel and maximum automation of deliveries. The 3 elevators are separated to allow separation of visitor, hospital and service traffic.

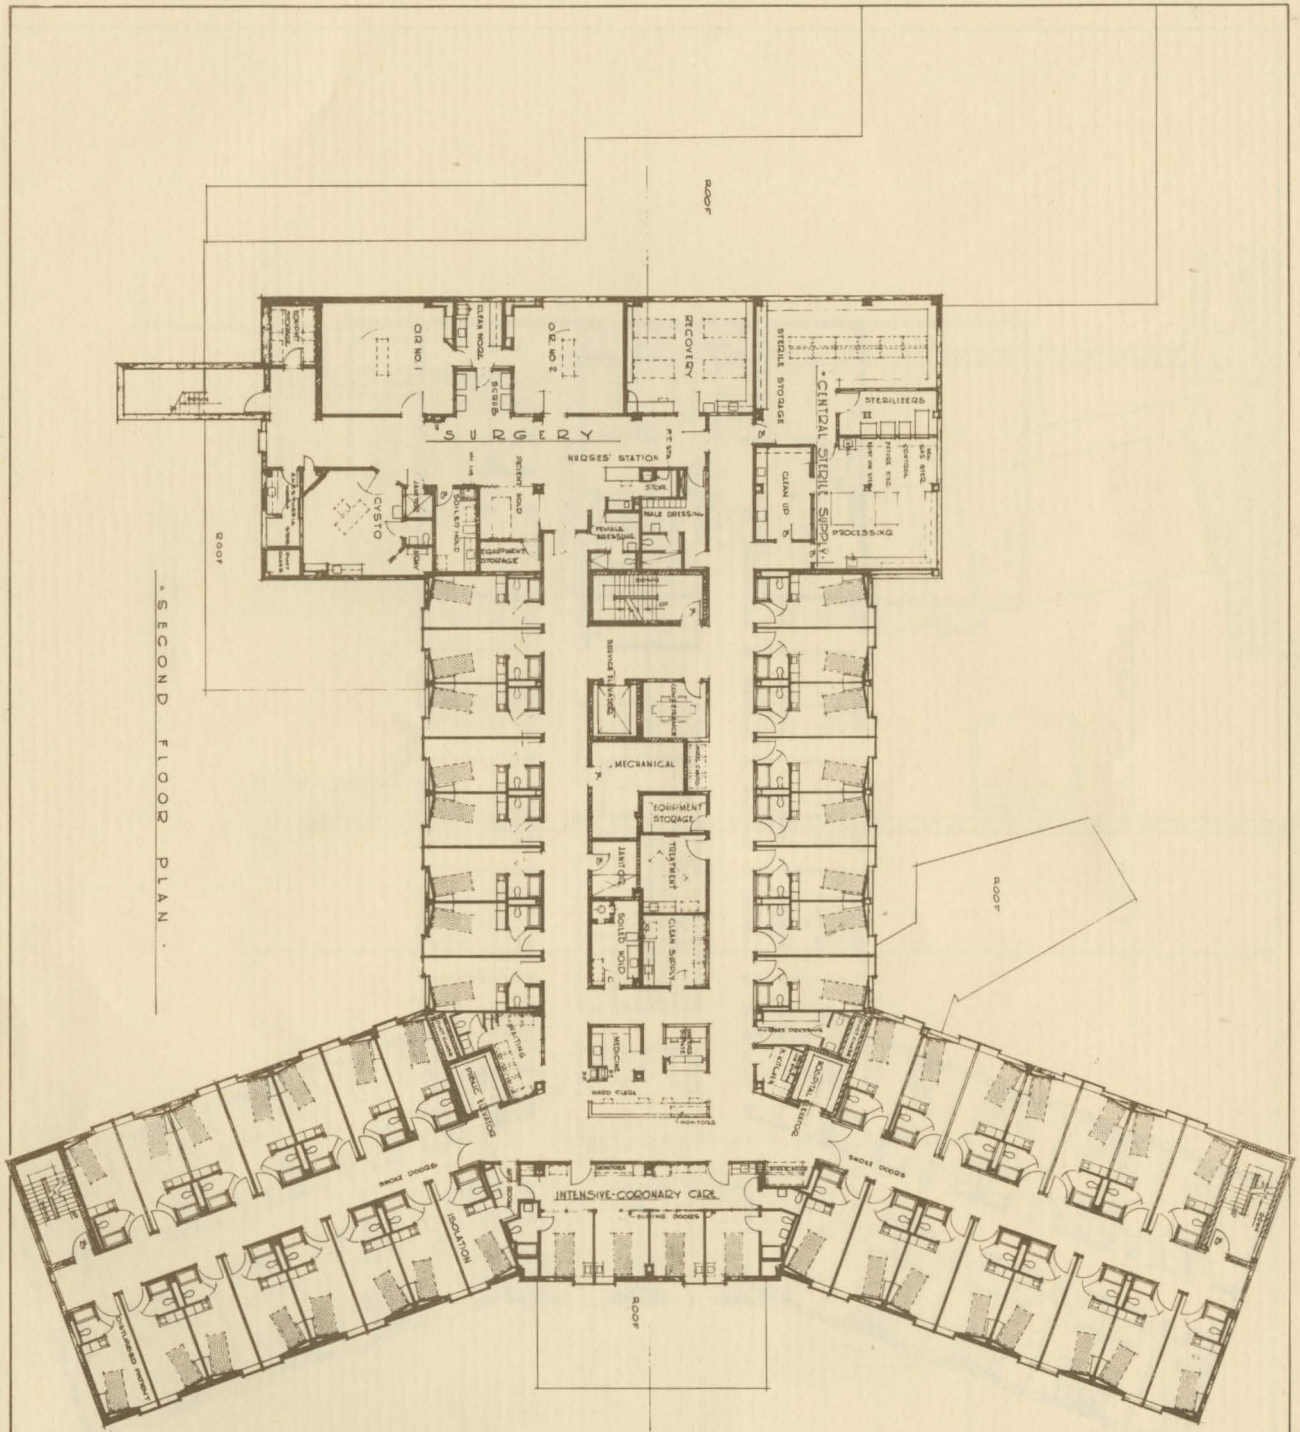

Exterior and interior walls, except for stairwell walls, are non-load bearing; patient room walls are designed to control sound and give a maximum of patient privacy. Finishes were selected for long life. Patterns and colors throughout the Hospital were chosen to avoid giving the facility a drab, institutional "feel". Oxygen and vacuum is available in each patient room as well as other essential areas in the hospital. Ceilings in most of the building are acoustic "lay-in" tile, allowing full accessibility to service lines and equipment.

The new Hospital, in conjunction with adjacent Medical Buildings and the renovated Long-Term-Care Unit, provides modern, up-to-date facilities to serve the community for years to come.
