Mother Tends Ship's Engine While at Sea

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (AP).—When the 105-foot Monsoon puts to sea, the woman's place is the engine room.

The woman is Mrs. Carolyn West of San Marino, Calif., who, with her husband, Jack, owns this converted army hospital ship.

The Monsoon, which comfortably sleeps 18 in its five staterooms, is large enough to accommodate a crew, but the Wests didn't want a crew. On their first cruise, from Seattle, Mrs. West found out from the engineer who rebuilt the craft what goes on below deck. Before many hours she was thoroughly familiar with all phases of the operations of the three 255-horsepower Diesels.
