These were in all respects average children, excepting two, a boy and a girl of Chang's, who were deaf-mutes.

ENG CHANG

FIG. 1. The twins in the acquired position (E. E., C. L.). From a photograph taken in St. Petersburg, 1870.

Mount Airy, Surrey county, N. C. They were prosperous farmers, each owning his own farm. The dwellings of the two families were a mile and a half apart. The twins resided three days in each of the homes alternately. They were expert in the handling of tools, in plowing, shingling, shooting, etc.

They lived much in the open air, and frequently drove in a carriage to the neighboring village.

The events leading to their death were as follows: About six years ago Chang, who had always been the more excitable, became addicted to immoderate drinking. Three years ago, while on a voyage from Liverpool to New York, he was stricken with hemiplegia of the right side. He in a great measure recovered from this attack, but could never ascend and descend stairs with facility. For this reason the twins occupied rooms on the ground floors of their homes.

On Monday evening, January 12, 1874, Chang was seized, while at his own house, with an attack of bronchitis. He had a cough; scanty, frothy sputa; but no pain. On Wednesday the symptoms had somewhat subsided; the skin was acting freely. Loud bronchial rales were present over the left side of the chest. On Thursday evening the twins insisted upon leaving Chang's house for Eng's. The weather was very cold, and the journey was undertaken in an open carriage. On their arrival, however, Chang continued as well as before, until Friday evening, when he complained of thoracic oppression and inability to lie down with comfort. After having retired that evening, the twins were heard to get up and go out on the porch, by the side of the house, where they drank of water, and returned to their room. They built a large wood fire and sat down; Eng soon complained of being sleepy, Chang declaring that he could not breathe if he should lie down. Finally they again retired. They both fell asleep. Near daybreak (January 17th) Eng called to one of his sons, who slept in a room above, to come down and waken Chang. The boy soon made his appearance, and going to the side of Chang, cried out, "Uncle Chang is dead!" Eng at once said, "Then I am going!" It is probable that Chang was sleeping when he died.

Eng made no further mention of Chang other than to request that the body be moved closer to him. Soon afterward Eng desired to have his limbs moved. This desire continued for half an hour. He then asked for a urinal, but did not void over cess could be well defined beneath the skin, the subcutaneous connective tissue being more abundant in Chang than in Eng. The upper surface measured two and one-half inches in width at its base toward Eng, and two and one-third inches at the base toward Chang. It was two inches wide at its middle.

FIG. 2. The twins in the acquired position (E. R., C. L.), showing band and the primary incisions. a b, c d. From a photograph taken after death at Philadelphia.

The lower surface was much narrower than the upper. It was marked in the centre, but nearer the anterior than the posterior border, by a linear scar one inch in length, which it was thought answered the position of the single umbilicus. The skin was adherent at this point, but elsewhere was easily raised in folds. Behind the scar—i. e., toward the posterior part of the band, the skin was somewhat corrugated. This portion answered, in position, to Chang's umbilical pouch.

The lateral surfaces. The terms upper surface and lower surface have fixed values, no matter how they may be approached by the observer. This is not the case, however, with the lateral surfaces, as will appear from the following considerations. Viewing the band as a separate form—as it was spoken of during the life of the twins—we will see that the terms front (" anterior ") and back (" posterior "), as given to the lateral surfaces, were derived from studying the acquired position. Thus we were bound not to cut the " front " of the band, but allowed to make an incision on the " back." Now this position of selection was destroyed, and its terms deprived of what meaning they may have had, by the reproduction of the congenital relations of the bodies.

There is no doubt that in infancy and early childhood there was no acquired position, and, therefore, neither " front " nor " back " to the band. And later, when, as we have reason to believe, the position of selection was gradually adopted, the terms " front " and "back " were reversible—the "front" meaning that which corresponded to the surface of least thoracic approximation. Thus when the adult condition was fixed, and the " front " answered to the widely separated right side of Eng's chest and left side of Chang's chest, the " back " was in relation with the closely approximated left side of Eng's chest and right side of Chang's.

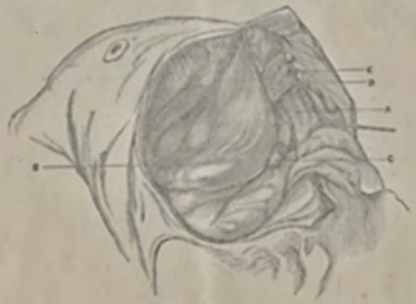

To avoid awkward repetition of phrases expressing the facts of the last sentence, the following characters will be employed in describing the " lateral " surfaces of the band.

Using the above signs, we found that the surface E. R., C. L.

tended entirely across the right hypochondriac and epigastric regions. Its external free border was not in contact with the ribs. Between it and the external abdominal wall there was an interval of nearly an inch at its greatest part, which was crossed by the external lateral ligament. The inferior border of the lobe rested upon and nearly concealed the pylorus of the stomach as well as upper half of right kidney. Corresponding in position to the upper portion of the right kidney was a well-defined layer of peritoneum, presenting a sharply defined internal border. Upon dissecting away the peritoneum from this border, it was found to answer to the inferior vena cava. The lesser omentum occupied its usual position. The fundus of the gall-bladder was two thirds of an inch beyond the anterior border of the lobe, immediately to the outer side of the caudal lobe. The position of the longitudinal fissure was well off to the left side of the abdomen, presenting, between the right and left lobes, a conspicuous cleft which was partially occupied by the base of the caudal lobe. The round ligament, with its

Mount Airy, North Carolina

This Reunion marks the 200th Anniversary of the Birth of the Siamese Twins (May 11, 1811)

Eng and Chang Bunker were born May 11, 1811 in Malong, Siam (Thailand) to Nok and Ti Eye. They died in 1874 at the age of 63. Other than being a medical miracle, they were more well known during their time than Abraham Lincoln and more famous throughout the world than Michael Jackson is today according to a May 15, 2011 article in the Charlotte News and Observer.

Bunker reunion brings family and those who want to learn

By WENDY BYERLY WOOD
Staff Writer

PILOT MOUNTAIN — Descendants of Eng and Chang Bunker, the original Siamese twins, met for their annual reunion Saturday at First United Methodist Church of Pilot Mountain. Among the descendants were a number of visitors working on films, books, documentaries and family histories related to the Bunker twins.

Slave's Descendant

Brenda Ethridge has traced her roots back to Grace Smith, more fondly known as Aunt Grace by the Bunker family. Aunt Grace was the slave of Eng and Chang Bunker and raised their 21 children.

"I was always curious about my grandfather's people because the family never even knew his mother's name," explained Ethridge, who was born in Mount Airy but now lives in Maryland. "I knew the heritage of the other parts of my family, so I decided I would search to see what information I could find on my paternal great-grandmother.

"I remember my aunts would say my father was from White Plains with those Bunkers," she continued. Her search eventually led her to the Bunker family reunion.

"I had gone on the Web and found Michael Bunker's site. I emailed and asked him if anyone knew about the Smith ancestors and told him they were probably slaves in the area," recalled Ethridge.

Michael Bunker led Ethridge to Chase and Milton Haynes, two family historians. They led her to Jessie Bunker Bryant, as well as the Surry Genealogical Association.

"Through all that I ended up at the family reunion hoping I would meet some people old enough to remember their grandparents talking about Aunt Grace," she explained. "All I know is that she took care of the children, chewed tobacco and smoked cigars at the same time and had unusually large feet.

"I thought there has to be more to a person than that. I want to find out what she was like, what she did, her normal day, rather than using my imagination, because I want to pass my heritage on to my offspring."

Through her searching, Ethridge, who is six generations from Aunt Grace, has also bought censuses from 1870 and 1880 as well as some other documentation from that time period in relation to weddings and newspaper clippings.

Thai Writer

Wilas Nirunsuksiri, an author from Zionsville, Ind., was also in attendance at the reunion.

Nirunsuksiri is writing a documentary book on the original Siamese twins that will be published in the Thai language and sold in Thailand.

"I was on eBay because I was trying to bid on a newspaper page on the Siamese twins," Nirunsuksiri explained how he ended up at the annual get-together. "The person who lost the bid contacted me and we talked by email. She said she knew Gary Collins, a relative of the Bunkers.

"I contacted him and he said his sister knew a lot more about the family history," said Nirunsuksiri.

"From there, she directed me to Jessie Bryant," he continued. "I talked to her a couple of times and she told me about the reunion."

Nirunsuksiri said his associate had told him about the story of the Siamese twins two years ago, but it has just been since the beginning of this year that he has followed up on the lead.

"I sent the publisher a couple of chapters and they liked it," said Nirunsuksiri, who hopes to have the book published by the end of the year.

Dear Sir,

I fully expected to have heard from you during our Stay in Utica, but have been unfortunately disappointed. Chang-Ing fully expect from this that Capt. Coffin is come home & have asked me to write to you again to let you Know our intended Movements.

Our Movements at present are through County Villages, for in all large Towns the panic is so great that people are not much inclined for amusement but I am happy to say that in the Villages Chang Ing do remarkably well — as their receipts are Considerable & their expenses light — However I shall give you a Sketch of our intended movements for some time to come —

On Wed. & Thr. 1st & 2d. August — we shall beat "Log City"
On Fri & Sat. 3d & 4th. — " — " — Manlius
On Mon & Tu — 6th & 7th. — " — " — Cazenovia
On Wed & Thr. — 8th & 9th. — " — " — Woodstock
On Fri & Sat. 10th & 11th. — " — " — De Ruyter

N.B. all the above are in Madison County — N.Y.

If on Receipt of this you should wish to write, you can direct to me at Woodstock or De Ruyter in Madison County — N.Y. at which places I shall leave our address so that any letters may be forwarded in case they should reach either of those Villages after our Departure.

If at any time you should be hereafter at a loss to know our intended movements I would recommend you to forward your letter to Mr. Hale at Boston who generally knows from Chang-Ing our Movements — as they often Communicate with him generally once a week. I have taken care that all letters sent to Utica shall be forwarded to us. — I am sorry I did not hear from you during our Stay in Utica — as I could have made a Remittance from that place of the remainder of the Balance of Money belonging to the Concern it Mr C.

Letter to Captain Davis From Chang-Eng

[illegible] Capt. D. is now returning & that we shall say soon see him — I shall write to you again in bor & says ——

Farewell

Dear Sir

Your obedient Servant

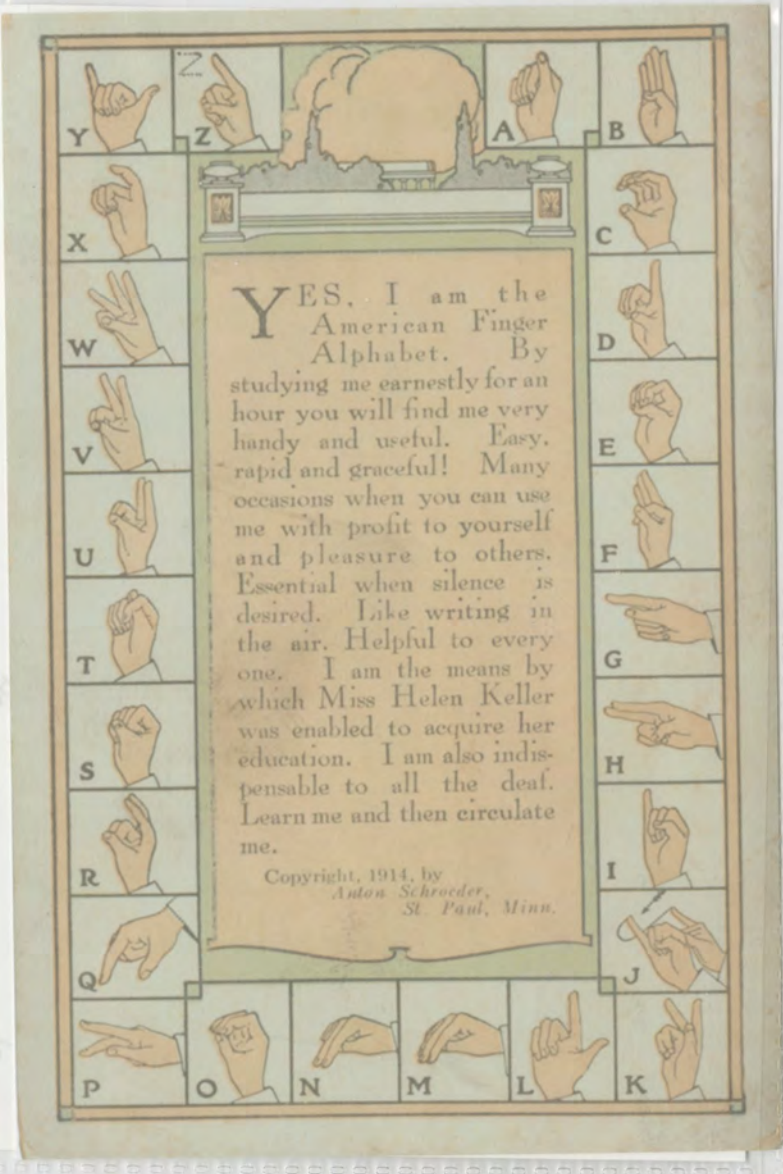

Charles Harris

Chang-Eng to Capt. Davis -

Dear Sir,

I hope you have rec'd the letter from Mr. Harris in which I sent a Message to Mrs Coffin asking her to have the kindness to send all the things in her care & belonging to me, to Elliott & Palmer No. 20 William St. New York If that letter has not been lost, I am quite surprised that I have not heard something on the subject long before now — If the letter has reached safely & that Mrs C — has had my Message delivered to her, I shall thank you to write & let me know whether she has any objection to give up my things; as I am much in want of many of them. — And indeed from the length of time since the Message was sent I much fear Mrs Coffin declines giving up my things which I should very much regret (if it should turn out so) as I don't know any reason why I should be treated so by Mrs C — but I still hope that there will be no objection raised to sending them as I requested they might be sent to Elliott & Palmer No. 20 William St. New York Pray do let us have a line from you by Return of post addressed to Woodstock, Madison Co. N. Y.

Death of the Siamese Twins—Shocking accident at Bastia, Ditto at Ulm—The Famine in Bengal.

NEW YORK, 20.—A special from Richmond makes the announcement of the sudden death of the celebrated Siamese twins, on Saturday morning the 17th, at their residence at Mount Airey, Surrey County, N. C. Chang was partially paralyzed last fall since which time he had been fretful and very much debilitated, and strongly addicted to drinking liquor as a means of alleviating his sufferings. He had been quite feeble for several days, so much so as to confine the brothers to bed. On Friday night Chang became worse and expired suddenly about four o'clock on Saturday morning. Eng became so terribly shocked that he raved wildly for awhile. This attack was followed by what seemed to be a deadly stupor, and in about two hours from the death of Chang, Eng breathed his last. The wives and families of the twins are in the deepest grief, the children, many of whom are deaf mutes, expressing their sorrow in the most pitiful manner.

Foreign papers contain a long story of a strange and disastrous accident in the Port of Bastia, Corsi-

A NOVEL CASE.—Cheng and Yang, the Siamese twins, have been tried in Trumbull county, Ohio, for an assault and battery committed on an old and respectable citizen. The defendants pleaded guilty, and were each fined five dollars and costs. The case is stated in the Warren News Letter, of July 2.
It is strange that where the offending party is one, by an indissoluble and natural bond, that they should be severed in judgment. It is a new precedent.—Globe.

BARNUM'S AMERICAN MUSEUM

Cor. Broadway and Ann St., opposite St. Paul's Church

On and after Monday, October 22, paying once will admit only once; there will be no readmission under any circumstances. The great expense attendant on the immense attractions constantly presented to the patrons of the Museum and the trouble and confusion created at the entrance by such readmissions, together with the numerous impositions practised by dishonest persons in attempting to have him in the Museum when they had not, compels the management to this course. Morning visitors, however, are always permitted to REMAIN IN to witness the Afternoon Performances.
