Glena said that one day her friend Zona B. Jarrell told Glenna's children about her in school. Glenna's daddy Thomas was their teacher. They were having a spelling match and Glenna's daddy told Glenna to spell "cake."

Glena said "kake" and everyone laughed and he told her to sit down. (Glena enjoyed telling this story to Zona's daughter Wilma when she would visit.)

Another story she told Wilma during one of her visits was that Zona Barker Jarrell's brother Cap lived with her mama for a long time after she married. She said Cap would finish one job and come and sit on the porch until Glena's mother would give him another job.

Glena lived on Herring Street in Toast. Her telephone number was 786-5816. Just past the Post Office and Fire Station, she lived on the left corner of Herring and old Toast Road in Toast. Gladys had been staying all the time for two years when Wilma Hiatt visited in February 1992. Gladys had a home in Walkertown where her two sons were living while she and Harry stayed in Toast with Glena. Glena was 94 when Wilma visited with them. She repeatedly told Wilma that she grew up with Zona and her sister Beatie, that Zona was her very best friend. Glena said that she would wish that Zona's mama was her mama because Zona and Beatie could just go anywhere they wanted to. Glena's mother wouldn't let her go many places. (Zona's mother died when she was five and her older sister raised her. That's probably the reason they were free to go places.)

Cosby Golding is mentioned in a story in the book, "Strings of Life." As the story goes...The brouhaha continues. Boyd (McKinney) mentions two of these frolicking citizens who finally had literally crawled home, a full mile, on hands and knees, in the ditch beside the road, afraid that a car might hit them on the roadway. "They couldn't get up and walk nary a lick. George Sutphin knocked the hell out of Porter Tickle, and Porter and Cosby Golding got to trying to waltz together, and they staggered and fell and ran their heads through a window, and stuck a piece of glass up in Porter's nose. Porter didn't know nothing when he got drunk! He was just plumb crazy!"...

Golding Transport Emphasizes Quality And Customer Loyalty

By JEFF LINVILLE
Staff Writer

When Senator Golding was a co-owner of Thomas Transport, the company had 125 rigs — too many in his book. With his own trucking company in Dobson now, he and his family are looking to build a smaller, more-personal firm.

When a company has hundreds of drivers, he said, the owner forgets who his people are. With 30 to 35 drivers, a boss can get to know each of his men well and build camaraderie.

Senator Golding is now the president of Golding Transport Inc. with his son and daughter-in-law assisting. Ellery Golding is the vice president, while his wife Beverly is secretary/treasurer.

The elder Golding and son started the business in 1994. The company was incorporated in July, and the first truck hit the roads on Aug. 1.

In just three years, the operation has reached two-thirds of its goal for vehicles by having 21 trucks and 51 drivers. Helping the Goldings are Dispatch Supervisor Paul Thomas, Shop Foreman Nick Beck and Office Administrator Monica Thomas.

Senator Golding said he bought his first truck in 1975 and had built up to seven by the time he merged with Thomas Produce Co. in 1980.

In 1989, Senator sold his share of the company — then called Thomas Transport — and bought half the trucks WLA Trucking had. He stayed with that company until May 1994, when he sold his share to start his own enterprise.

Son Ellery, 39, graduated from North Surry High School in 1977 and began as safety/personnel director for Thomas Transport in 1983. Ellery said he joined the company after his father's partner asked him to come aboard. In 1989, he was named director of operations.

After his father moved to WLA, Ellery Golding stayed with Thomas Transport until 1993, when he rejoined Senator at WLA.

Ellery says his goal is trying to provide the best service in the business.

Senator said he talks to people daily to hear what they think of the job he and his drivers are doing. He said he hears a lot of "atta boys" from people who like and want the Dobson firm's service.

Everything is so competitive in the trucking industry, the two agreed. People usually look at rates first and then service.

they said, so a business must be good at both.

"All we've got is sale and service," Senator said of his duties. Keeping operations simple makes it easier to consistently provide quality, he figures.

At Thomas Transport, Senator recalled, the business was simplified by having the three owners split up responsibilities. Senator was in control of purchases and maintenance and didn't worry with dispatching or sales.

Heading up their own business, Ellery said, can lead to fewer headaches by not having too many cooks in the kitchen, but means more work.

When it comes to their drivers, the Goldings agree that truckers are the ones who make the company. "We're just the wagon-masters," Ellery said.

Senator added that president is just a title he holds. The real presidents are the truckers and the customers. "Without drivers, there are no customers; without customers, there is no need for drivers."

The company's president said he also is willing to train his people. If a mechanic has learned all that local classes can teach, then Golding is willing to send the mechanic to a training program in Atlanta. The employees need to have as much knowledge as they can get, he said, even if they become so valuable other companies try to steal them.

What drivers want are a voice so that owners listen to their concerns, and quality time at home, Senator said. By giving drivers both, the Goldings hope to keep good workers.

Goldings Adopt Wounded Fawn, Or Are Adopted

Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Golding and son, Bobby, probably never dreamed that their future held a bit of wildlife.

At least until Sunday, that is.

Then it was that the residents of 1775 South Franklin Road found themselves playing godfamily to a weeks-old fawn—and a crippled one at that.

It was found near Sparta, and it was lucky for the fawn that circumstances occurred as they did.

The Goldings surmise that the fawn may have been injured by its mother as she was fleeing from some dogs, or leading them away from the baby buck. At any rate, an area resident found the little deer, injured with a broken leg and a nasty gash.

The unidentified person was preparing to put an end to the fawn's suffering, when Mr. Golding's aunt came upon the scene and to the rescue, very nearly in the nick of time.

She rescued the fawn, and then turned it over to the Mount Airy area residents, who brought it home with them, had the leg set, tended the gash and began feeding it with a baby bottle.

The fawn, kept in a large box in a house behind the Golding home, has made remarkable progress. In the short time the Goldings have had it, it now ignores the cast and jumps out of the box. On one occasion, it was following a neighbor home when it was discovered.

Future plans for the different type of household pet: "We'll try to keep it."

Public plans call for it to be at the opening of the Mt. Pilot Camp Grounds Saturday and Sunday. The new business venture of Golding's is located off N. C. Highway 268, about three miles east of the intersection of Highways 52-268.

For Surry County Fire Marshal Doug Jones, being involved with firefighting is practically a genetic given.

Before he was born his father, Roger Douglas Jones, was a member of the Franklin Volunteer Fire Department in Toast. Jones' mother, Annie Belle, was in the unit's auxiliary. "I grew up in the fire department," he said.

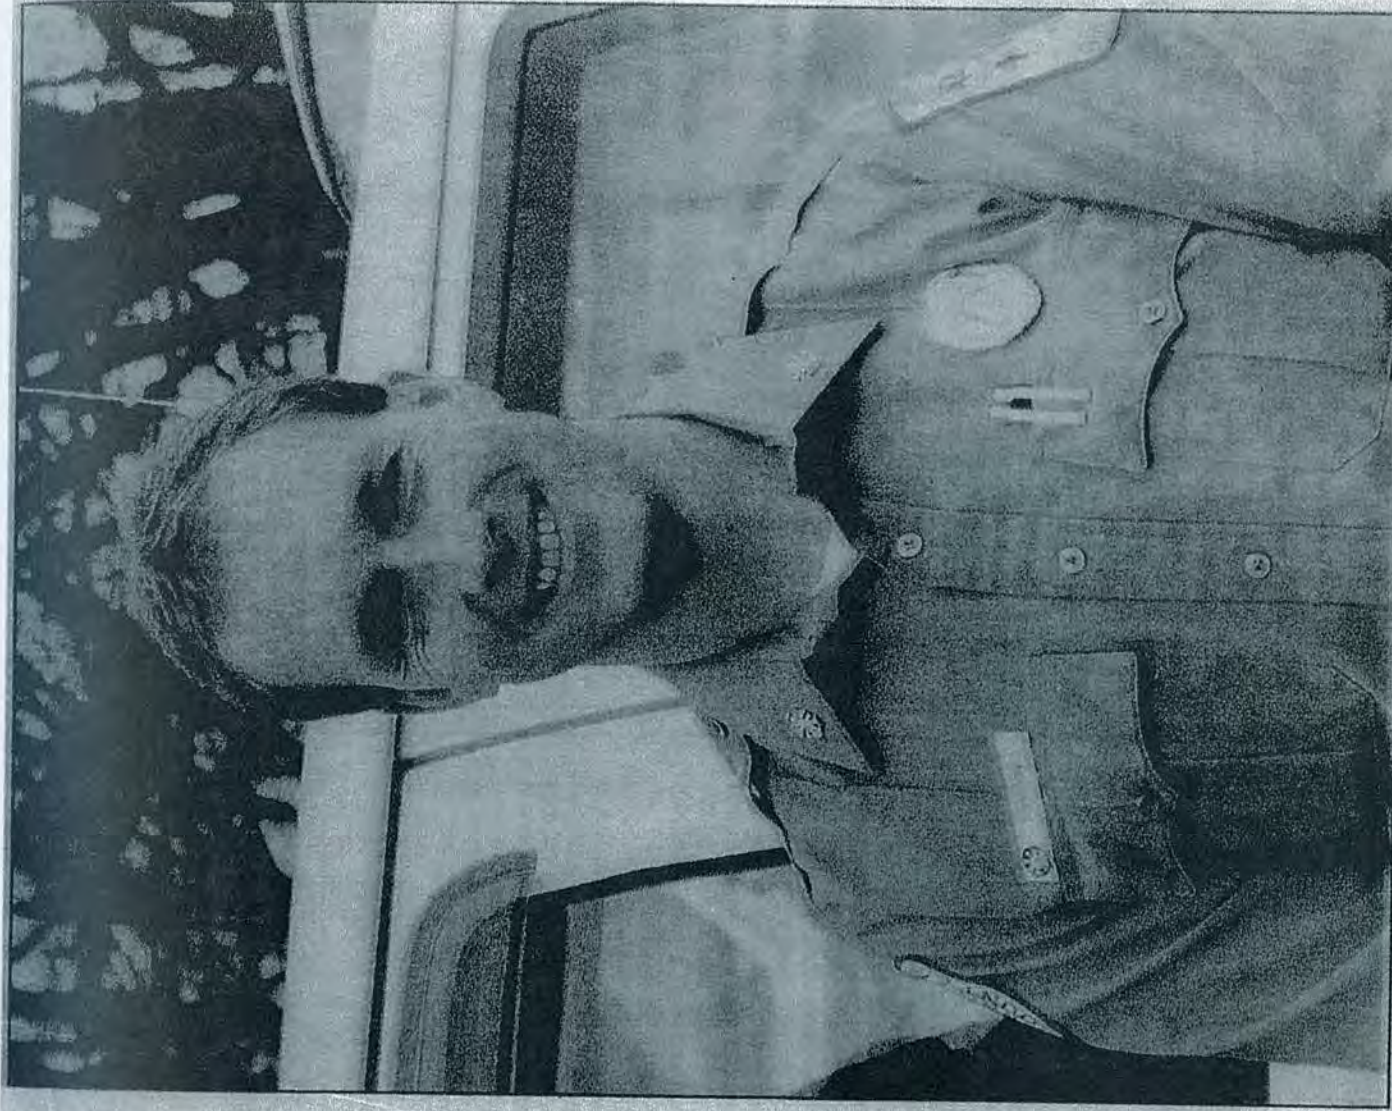

"Growing up, I didn't know what I would do, but it was a natural thing to join the fire department when I got old enough — or even before I got old enough," Jones confesses that he joined at age 14. By early next year he'll have his state firemen's retirement paid in full.

But the path from fireman to Surry County fire marshal wasn't as predictable as it might seem.

When he was 18, Jones started hanging around the Surry Emergency Medical Service with a friend who had joined the EMS. "I even took an EMT (Emergency Medical Technician) class, but I had never thought I'd do it professionally."

"Then in 1981, the EMS started a volunteer reserve program and I jumped on that. It just took off from there. I guess the timing was just right for me. I was a volunteer for less than a year and was hired as a full-time EMS employee in November 1984," Jones said.

"From then until April of '89, I worked as a paramedic. I really enjoyed it," he continued. "I didn't quit (to become fire marshal) because I paramedic. I really enjoyed it," he continued. "I didn't quit (to become fire marshal) because I didn't like it, but I felt like it was a career advancement, plus it got me back to the fire side of things, which was a kind of natural progression."

Just a year after becoming a paramedic, an incident beyond Doug Jones' control further influenced him toward the move to the fire marshal's office. While driving in Mount Airy, he was involved in an automobile accident. His vehicle overturned and he was badly hurt.

"My former partner, Ronald Ayers, ran the call. I know it was hard on him. I can imagine, because we were not only partners, we were and still are friends, and he knew how bad I was." Jones broke his back and suffered a cerebral contusion in the 1985 wreck. "It messed me up in a lot of ways," he said.

"If it had not been for the folks in EMS and my family, my recovery would have been much harder. With the type of head injury I had, it was very iffy how much I would recover, if any. I was very fortunate to come out of it — I'm very aware of how bad a shape I was in."

Although the accident didn't affect Jones' ability to deal with running EMS calls to accidents, it did, eventually, play a part in causing him to look into the fire marshal's job.

"The last couple of years I worked with the EMS, it was getting difficult for me to lift a stretcher because of the injury to my back. I would work two days and spend the next two trying to recover enough to return to work."

"When I saw the fire marshal's job was coming up, I saw a way to get away from the lifting and still be involved with emergency services."

His life off the job also was changing. In February 1989, Jones married Jan, a Patrick County native whom he met while she was working as a reporter for The Mount Airy News. She since has become a teacher, he said, and is a tremendous help with his report-writing ability.

By April of that year, Jones was appointed to the fire marshal's post, and has held the position ever since. "The county is the only job I have had since I was 20 years old," he said.

Becoming fire marshal, while it does involve fires, meant that Jones could no longer be a firefighter. "I really miss that," he said, adding that his brother David has followed the family tradition and is a firefighter at Franklin. "If there is one downside to this job, that's it — I don't get to actively fight fires, which I enjoy, but I do get to train firefighters and work with them."

Jones considers working with the fire department his favorite part of the job. "I don't do it as much as I did in the beginning, but I like to work directly with fire departments and help them on their operations, what they do. I don't tell them how to do it, but I work with them to figure out things to suit their needs the best."

His other on-the-job love is fire investigations. "I really love doing them and being on the site. That's a side I never knew existed before I got into this. All my past experience is needed, but instead of using it for suppressing the fire, I use it to determine what caused it — it's the same thought process turned in a different direction."

"It fascinates me how the chemistry and physics work and I'm always ready to learn more about it — it's a backwards investigation," the fire marshal said. "You have to take what happened and follow it back to its origin."

The worst part of the job, he says, is the never-ending paperwork. Although it is necessary, it takes time and keeps him away from other duties. "I've sat for days on end working on maps and descriptions," said Jones, who had spent most of one recent day updating state fire regulations.

In his spare time, Jones enjoys outdoor activities — although he had to give up most sports after his accident. He still can water ski, and said it seems to help his back, and up until last spring had a boat. "We've decided to get into camping more," Jones said, adding that he also recently has moved to a new home.

The slowdown is a shift toward activities that will more easily include children — and perhaps another generation of firefighters in the Jones family, he admits.

But as far as the family firefighting tradition, Jones says it's no big deal that he's now fire marshal. "My dad and I have never talked about it," he said. "He's proud of whatever I do."

Golding to swim for Mars Hill

By THOMAS LESTER

DOBSON — Surry Central senior swimmer Tiffany Golding has made a splash statewide in each of her three seasons of high school competition.

And after what she hopes is a successful senior year, Golding will be moving on and leaving others in her wake while swimming for Mars Hill College.

Golding, who will be receiving athletic and academic grants to swim for the Lions, said coach Teddy Guyer and the team's swimmers made her feel welcome, which helped contribute to her decision. She also said the school's education program appealed to her, as well. Golding wants to be a high school math teacher.

"Education comes first and they have a great program in what I want to become," Golding said. "The head coach there is awesome. He's really nice and the swimmers I'm going to be swimming with are sweet and down to earth and I could get along with each and every one of them.

That made my decision easy."

Golding, who swims the 200 and 100 Freestyle for the Golden Eagles, has finished in the top five in the three times she has swum in the state championships. Surry Central coach Amber Flippen said she expects another strong run from Golding, who is a captain this season.

"Tiffany is a remarkable young woman, an athlete, a scholar," Flippen said. "She has been an asset to our team all year for all four years. She's a captain this year. She's been top five in the state all three years and we expect that this year if not a state championship or runner-up. We're excited that she has this opportunity and that she's representing Surry Central this way."

In addition to swimming for Surry Central, Golding also hits the pool for Star Aquatics, a year-round swim team that is based in the Triad. Locally, Jason Worley coaches for Star at Reeves Community Center and has worked with Golding since she joined.

Worley said Golding has really come on since she started swimming for Star, so he's glad to see her get rewarded with the scholarship.

"The improvement from over a year has been phenomenal," Worley said. "It's great to know you have someone who swims at your site who is a scholarship swimmer. Obviously they've put in the effort through the years, especially the last two years that I've seen. I think it's going to be a great opportunity."

Star Aquatics coach Chris Bowker added that Mars Hill is getting itself quite the competitor and athlete.

"Her personality matches her talent level," Bowker said. "They're definitely getting a great person and a great athlete."

Ellery Golding, Tiffany's father, said the coaches have all made an impact in his daughter's life and they deserve some credit for her accomplishments.

"I want to thank Amber, who started her out in summer leagues and worked her way up to high school," Ellery Golding said. "I want to thank Star Aquatics for year-round swimming to bring her to where she's at."

December 2006

Tiffany also gave credit to her coaches, who have been supportive of her aspirations since Day One.

"Amber was with me probably the longest of anybody else here," she said. "I remember we used to joke about how she taught me the butterfly and now it's become one of my best strokes. Jason is my head coach and he's worked really hard and put a lot of time in helping me. I thank him for that. Chris worked with me over the summer and taught me a whole lot about technique and endurance. Jay (Dodson) always helps everybody."

Dodson, Star Aquatics' head coach, said Golding can serve as a great example for other swimmers in the program, or anybody who has a dream and wants to chase it.

"It helps teach our younger people if you apply yourself to something and you set your goals and dreams, you can achieve as long as you give the effort and put the work behind you," Dodson said.

Eagles' 400 relay team holds top seed heading into state championships

By JEREMY MOORHOUSE

PILOT MOUNTAIN — Surry Central's 200 & 400 Freestyle relay team boasts some of the best swimming talent in the state.

On Saturday, the Eagles' fast four of Tiffany Golding, Morgan Robertson, Lyncee Kowalcik and Kirstin Gardner will get the chance to bring home a state title in the NCHSAA Class 1-A/2-A state swimming championships at N.C. State University in Raleigh.

All four swimmers are naturals in the water — they've been swimming for several years and are part of year-round clubs like the North Piedmont Aquatic Club or Star Aquatics.

Central is seeded first in the 400 Freestyle.

"I think that we have a possibility of winning it," said Robertson, a junior.

Teammate Tiffany Golding, the lone senior on the team, is making her fourth trip to the state meet.

"It's been a really good senior year and I think this will be a really great way to end it," Golding said. "I'm excited. I know we will all work hard together."

Golding finished third place at states in the 200 and 100 Freestyle in her sophomore and junior year. Robertson also finished in the top five in the 100 Butterfly and 100 Backstroke.

Coach Amber Flippen's team put up an impressive time of 1:48.00 in the 200 in an MVC meet against Forbush and Summit earlier this season. The best time in the 400 was 3:51.73 at Elkin.

The Eagles as a team have not been beaten this year.

"This is their first year swimming together as a high school relay team," Flippen said. "We knew coming into the season they were going to be real strong competitors. We are looking for a high state finish."

Top three would be nice but at least the top five."

Central has never finished first or second in a relay at state. Seventy-five teams will compete on Saturday.

"They are all just motivated to get in there and be the first ones to do it at their school and bring home a medal," Flippen said.

"They are motivated individually and as a team. They want to do well in their individual events but then they want to come together in the relay and push the envelope a little bit."

The youngsters on the team aren't showing any signs of being nervous.

For Kowalcik, a freshman, it will be her first trip to the state meet.

"I think we'll do really good. It will just be a really good experience," she said.

"I think we'll place really high," fellow freshman Kirsten Gardner said.

Golding said the team exceeded expectations in the MVC Conference championship, which the Eagles won for the second year in a row.

Last year was the first conference title in school history.

"Competition always helps me," Golding said. "There are some really fast swimmers there but we are really strong individually, so we'll do fine."

Also competing in the state meet for the Eagles, will be the boys 200 relay team of Josh Moser, Brian Norman, Cody Faw and Levi Schmidt as well as Alle Taylor, Paige Martin, Whitney Hackworth and Kayla Thomas, who will compete in the 200 Medley Relay as well as in individual events. Laura Lowery is swimming as an alternate.

Golding standard set for Mars Hill swimming

Ed Phillips
Staff Reporter

It's not just Golding's speed that she brings to the pool, but stamina as well. She usually swims the 50, 100 and 500-yard freestyles as well as a few relays. Although she hasn't swam the event this season, Golding holds the school record in the 100 individual medley with a time of 1:04.72.

"She does whatever I need her to do," Mars Hill coach Teddy Guyer said. "She's a well-rounded swimmer."

Golding began her collegiate career as a sprinter. When a position opened for a distance swimmer, she came to Guyer's mind.

"She's the type of person that's going to give you 100 percent all the time," Guyer said. "She came in a great swimmer, she's still a great swimmer. She does whatever we ask her to and she does it well.

"She was never apprehensive (about swimming distance as well as sprints this season). It's more she's just having to put a little more time into training for the long-distance events."

Golding has embraced her new role, even if the event is familiar.

"I used to be a long-distance swimmer," Golding explained. "Towards my senior year of high school I started doing a lot of sprints. This year we didn't have a lot of people doing distance and lately I've been good at it."

While swimming for the past 11 years, Golding has always found a way to challenge herself. This season was no different.

"We've recruited a lot of good new swimmers, so it's really pushed me in the pool," Golding said. "It's just more competition. The swim team itself is really nice. It's easier to swim when you get along and you're friends inside and outside of the water."

After today's meet, the Lions will compete in the Appalachian Swimming Conference meet beginning Feb. 20. Guyer said she will swim the 50, 100 and 500 freestyles.

"I expect her to be right at the top," Guyer said. "Definitely top 3 in all her events. If she breaks something out, she has a great chance of winning."

During her time at Surry Central. Golding was a regular at the state meet, with her best effort a second-place finish in the 100 freestyle her freshman year.

After she graduated from Surry Central in 2007, Golding became the center of attention of local swimming coaches.

"She was definitely my top recruit last year," Guyer said, "and we worked hard to get her."

"She was looking at a lot of the other Division II schools in the area and luckily we got her."

A junior in the classroom and sophomore in the pool, Golding exemplifies the student athlete.

The dean's list regular spends her summers earning extra credits, in addition to practicing her strokes. Her major is middle school education with a concentration in math and science.

Cub Cadet has announced its 2003 Top Dealer incentive trip winners. The winners were selected based on their outstanding dealer sales ranking and superior customer service.

The awarded trip took place Feb. 5-12 on the big island of Hawaii on the Kona-Ia Coast.

The award was given to Mount Airy Saw 'n' Mower, who now ranks as one of the Cub Cadet's Top Dealers nationwide. Of the over 1800 Cub Cadet dealerships nationwide, less than five percent earned this trip.

Cub Cadet manufactures outdoor power equipment sold throughout the United States, Canada and Europe, and sells products worldwide. Cub Cadet is designed to provide a wide variety of outdoor power equipment for both residential and commercial markets. The company was founded in 1961 and is headquartered in Cleveland, Ohio.

Steve Golding, Mount Airy Saw and Mower

What does the 4th of July mean to me?

Freedom and liberty and pride for America.

What does your family do special for the holiday?

Spend time together and visit family members. Then at night, set off fire works or go see them.

What will you do different this year than in the past?

Pay close attention to others and see if we, as a country, still remember 9-11, and to let America know we remember and care by showing of flags and fireworks.
